People are finding out that they can't correctly spell simplified spelling without a simplified spelling book.

Because the Czar of Russia has returned to Peterhof palace it is declared that he is no coward. What appears to be courage in the Czar may be nothing but resignation.

Several New York papers are advocating the abolition of the coroner. Better hold on to him till the 6th of November when it may be necessary to issue a burial permit for the G. O. P.

"No fairy tales are produced now," says a reviewer of books. That is a positive reflection on the fanciful and picturesque yarns spun by married men to keep things quiet at home when they do not come in on schedule time.

The proposition to place a "draw" in the trestle over the Banks Channel hasn't a leg to stand on. It is a notorious fact that it would benefit only three or four owners of pleasure boats, while it would prove not only inconvenient but positively dangerous to ten of thousands of people who frequent Wrightsville Beach.

The Hon. Grover Cleveland has broken that profound silence that he has lately maintained, politically speaking. In an interview at Princeton on Thursday he said "I cannot but regard the Democratic situation presented to my old associates in New York as an afflicted one." Of Hearst he said: "His nomination alone was a calamity to the Democratic party. It placed thousands of good men who believe in Democratic principles, and who rebel against voting for a Republican, in a terrible situation."

Hon. John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, delivered a campaign speech at Statesville yesterday and will speak at Greensboro on Monday if the Congressional Campaign Committee does not call him out of North Carolina to send him into the 9th Virginia district to try to beat Congressman Campbell Slemp. Hon. John Wesley Gaines in charge of Democratic headquarters at Wasington on Friday was attempting to find Mr. Williams by telegraph on Friday night. "We do not need Williams or anybody else in Blackburn's district," Mr. Gaines said, "because Hackett will come to Congress from that district beyond a doubt. I believe Williams' dates will be changed as soon as the committee can get hold of him."

RECEIPTS OF COTTON

High Prices Prevailing Past Week Brought Much of the Staple to Market.

MUCH ACTIVITY IN SHIPPING

Two Cargoes For Foreign Export Yesterday—Other Vessels That Arrived and Departed—Disabled Crew Lost One Man.

The prevailing high prices for cotton the past week had the effect of bringing the staple to market with a rush. The receipts up to Friday's closing were 47,717 bales against only 41,215 the corresponding week last season. The receipts since September first are, however, not quite up to those of a corresponding date last year. Last season at this time 108,963 bales had been received while this year the number has been only 82,566. At the rate the staple is coming to market now, however, the close of the present week will probably find the figures about even. Yesterday the receipts were 4,157 bales against 2,695 same day last season. The local market was quoted yesterday firm at 10 3-4 cents for middling which means that the best grades would bring 11 cents or over.

The opening of the cotton season always livens up affairs of shipping and yesterday this was particularly noticeable. Two British steamers went down the river yesterday morning with cargoes of the fleecy staple for the other side. They were the Ribston, previously cleared, and the Nolisement, which completed her cargo yesterday. The Nolisement carried 14,208 bales, valued at $795,000 and consigned by Messrs. Alexander Sprunt & Son to parties in Bremen, Germany. The British steamer Westlands, which brought cargo of fertilizer constituents to Wilmington, also cleared yesterday and passed down the river about the same time. She goes light to Newport News and was cleared by Messrs. Heide & Co.

The British schooner Cartagena, Capt. Cahoon, which has been at the Cape Fear Quarantine Station since last week on account of the sickness of captain and crew, cleared yesterday for New York whither she was bound from Panama with cargo of cocoanuts. The second of her crew, Second Mate Nelson Hammond, died after reaching the quarantine station. A negro seaman was lost before the vessel reached Southport. The crew had a malignant form of malarial fever, but all have about recovered now with the exception of those who died. The mate was buried at Southport.

Several heavy draft steamers are due at Southport with cargoes of fertilizer constituents for the several guano, factories here. The first of these arrived at quarantine yesterday afternoon. She is the Cheviot Range, 2,227 tons, and is drawing 22 feet of water. She will proceed to Wilinmgton early this week.

THE SERVICES TODAY

Great Interest in Series of Revival Meetings at First Baptist Church Now in Progress—Sunday Announcements Are Made.

Four services have been arranged for at the First Baptist church to-day. The first meeting will be at 10 o'clock and will be for prayer and conference. Every one who is concerned about the salvation of the lost will receive a cordial welcome to this meeting. Sunday School teachers and parents are especially urged to atend. At the 11 and 7:30 o'clock services Dr. Hamilton will preach. The regular Sunday School exercises from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock will be curtailed and Dr. Hamilton has consented to make a talk.

The two meetings yesterday were full of interest. At the morning service the evangelist spoke to the children and parents on the subject, "Why I Believe in Young People Coming to Christ." Last night the subject of the sermon was, "Does it Pay to be a Christian," founded on a portion of the sixth chapter of Matthew's Gospel. Dr. Hamilton spoke for twenty or thirty minutes and then turned the services into an experience meeting. A number of those present spoke briefly, saying why they knew that it paid to be a Christian. Dr. Hale, the pastor, and the Rev. Mr. Wakefield, the singer-evangelist, made interesting talks. Mr. Wakefield's recital of the earlier years of his Christian life, s struggles and his final estrangement from his parents because of the stand he took for the Christ, made a lasting impression on his hearers and brought many tears of sympathy to the eyes of the congregation. A goodly number were out last night, notwithstanding that Saturday is not an opportune time to gather a congregation of worshippers in Wilmington.

SUSPENDED BUSINESS

Dixie Cafe Temporarily Closed For Benefit of Creditors—Adjustment of Affairs Now Being Made and Place Will Open Again.

In order that its business affairs may be adjusted for the best interest of all concerned, the Dixie Cafe, on Princess street, the pioneer all-day and all-night restaurant in Wilmington, was voluntarily closed by Messrs. A. A. Hergenrother and E. P. Dudley, the proprietors, yesterday morning. The affairs of the enterprise are now being adjusted and it is expected that the business will be open again in a day or two. No process of the court issued to close the place and the act was entirely with a purpose on the part of the proprietors to secure an equitable adjustment of all claims to the best advantage of all creditors. The young men at the head of the enterprise are among the most popular in Wilmington and they have a great many friends who greatly regret their temporary financial embarrassment.

At the time it was decided to close the business, Mr. Dudley was absent from the city and upon his return last night he concurred in what his partner, Mr. Hengenrother, had done and steps will be at once taken to make a proper disposition of the property so that all may share to the best advantage. It is not known just yet whether the cafe will be opened again or not or by whom if it is opened.

The creditors of the firm have been very generous in their dealing with the young men, recognizing their misfortune, and arrangements may be made by which the business will be continued by the same firm. The difficulties of the management of a business of the kind easily suggest themselves to one, but it is proposed to reorganize affairs and run them on a more systematic basis than before.

Hon. Jno. Sharpe Williams Tuesday.

Hon. John Sharpe Williams, of Mississippi, Democratic leader in Congress, and one of the most brilliant campaigners in the country, will speak at Goldsboro on Tuesday of this week. The hour of the speaking is 1 P. M., so that persons desiring to attend from along the line of the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad may go up on the morning train and return the same afternoon. The indications are that an immense crowd will be present. Reduced rates are advertised on the railroads.

PAWNEE BILL SHOWS

Big Tented Enterprise of Wild West and Great Far East Celebrities in Wilmington For Two Exhibitions To-morrow.

Before these lines have been read by many, barring accidents, the great Pawnee Bill's Wild West Shows will have pitched their tents at Hilton Park, where two exhibitions will be given to-morrow at the usual hours. The shows were witnessed by an immense crowd in Fayetteville yesterday and were due to reach here on a train of several sections over the A. & Y. road between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning. It is a giant aggregation and the unloading of the animals and paraphrenalia will be an interesting sight for many who will journey out to the grounds for an afternoon stroll to-day.

The shows have received nothing but the highest praise in all cities where they have appeared this season and the Wilmington engagement is likely not to prove an exception to the rule. Promptly at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning the magnificent street parade of Pawnee Bill will leave the grounds at Hilton and pass along the principal streets of the city. The parade of the aggregation of cowboys, ponies, Indians, Western cowgirls, etc., is in two sections and is said to be over a mile long. Many of the big shows have "cut out" the parade owing to its great expense and the trouble always involved, but the parade of the Pawnee Bill outfit is too strong a feature to be eliminated and it will be seen in all its splendor to-morrow.

The Consolidated Company has anticipated a very heavy travel on show day and has arranged to handle the crowds not only on the regular cars of the city line, but also on suburban cars which will be operated on special schedules to fit the emergency.

WERE SHANGHAIED

Sailors Arrested for Desertion Tell Sensational Story of Presence on Britisher.

BELONG TO U. S. MARINES

Say They Were Inveigled Aboard Steamer Osceola at Newport News Last Week—Before the Mayor Yesterday Afternoon.

Claiming to be firemen of the first-class aboard the United States Cruiser Columbia, John James Byrnes and Thomas Flynn, sailors arrested by the local police yesterday morning upon a charge of desertion from the British steamer Osceola, Capt. McLean, now in port for cargo of cotton, told a sensational story of being shanghaied at Newport News last week at a hearing before Mayor Waddell at the City Hall yesterday afternoon. The story, if true, will doubtless lead to serious complications for some one.

Upon the request of the British Vice Consul, to whom complaint had been made by Capt. McLean, of the Osceola, that the men had deserted from their ship, Byrnes, Flynn, Herman Lusk and a Dane by the name of Roschman were taken in custody yesterday morning by the Wilmington police and landed in the station house to await the sailing of the ship. The men asked a hearing and Mayor Waddell granted it to them yesterday afternoon, J. O. Carr, Esq., appearing as counsel for the master of the ship and George L. Peschau and William J. Bellamy, Esq., for the defendants Lusk, Byrnes and Flynn. Roschman was not represented by counsel.

Lusk testified that he was an American citizen; that he had requested permission of the captain to see the U. S. Commissioner, the British Vice Consul or the Health authorities here for the purpose of lodging complaint as to the sanitary condition of the crew's quarters; that permission had been denied him; that he expressed intention of doing so anyhow and was told if he left the ship he would be regarded as a deserter. He left and his arrest soon followed.

Byrnes and Flynn told the sensational story. Both testified that they had been shanghaied. Their testimony was in substance that they were on board the U. S. S. Columbia, which was lying in Hampton Roads last week when the Osceola touched there for coal on her way to Wilmington from Rio Janeiro. They were sent ashore from the Columbia to get some grate bars for the cruiser and while on land they were accosted by a stranger and invited to take a drink. They accepted and accompanied the stranger to a saloon where others joined them, among them several runners for a sailors' boarding house. They took several drinks and knew nothing more until they found themselves aboard the Osceola. Byrnes said that when he realized that he was not aboard his own ship he notified the captain that he belonged aboard the U. S. S. Columbia and demanded to be put ashore. The captain, he said refused to let him go. He made an effort to get ashore by the gang plank but a police officer at Newport News forced him to return. He then made an effort to escape by jumping overboard but was caught and returned to the ship. Both men said that they had no knowledge of signing any articles and testified further that at the first opportunity after reaching Wilmington they notified the officials at the Custom House and were making efforts to be returned to the U. S. S. Columbia. Brynes claims to be a naturalized American citizen and Flynn says he has filed his "intention" papers. Roshman, the Dane, put in a plea that he had been coerced by boarding house runners.

Capt. McLean denied that either Byrnes or Flynn appeared to be in the least drunk or doped when they came aboard. He testified that Byrnes had signed articles under the name of P. Murphy and that Flynn had shipped as John O'Brien. The ship's register was introduced showing the names Murphy and O'Brien and failing to show any such names as Byrnes or Flynn. The captain of the Osceola made a sweeping denial as to the unsanitary condition of the ship and both he and the chief engineer denied the statements of the seamen in every material particular.

Counsel for the defendants contended that the weight of the testimony showed Lusk, Byrnes and Flynn to be American citizens and that such being established the Mayor had no right to surrender them to the master

SEABOARD'S COALING STATIONS.

The Charlotte Chronicle on Friday contained this interesting mention of the new coal road of the Seaboard Air Line, the South & Western, now being constructed from the coal fields in southwestern Virginia and east Tennessee into North Carolina:

"The Charleston News and Courier is much interested in some developments concerning the Seaboard Air Line road which leads it to believe that the road is to be evtended to Charleston. The company has formally asked permission to build its tracks through certain streets of that city. 'The Seaboard,' says The News and Courier, 'is now building its lines through the mountains to the coal fields of Tennessee and Virginia, and it must have an ocean outlet for the products of its mines. It can go readily to Southport on the North Carolina coast, but the petition that has been submitted to the city council in the best possible faith indicates that the Seaboard would like to come to Charleston. It already owns valuable terminal property in our eastern water front, and it would be to the great advantage of Charleston if the system should be built into Charleston.'

"According to The News and Courier, the plans of the Seaboard have already been made, and if the rights of way now asked for be granted there is good reason to believe that within a reasonable time the construction of a road from Charleston to some point on the main line of the Seaboard, probably near Camden, will be undertaken. 'Indeed,' says the Charleston paper, 'construction work is already in progress in this State on a certain stretch of road which would be made a part of the through Seaboard line to the coal fields and beyond to the Ohio river, atw hich point the system would connect with other lines which would give Charleston an almost straight air line from the ocean to Chicago.' The News and Courier has the facts pretty straight. It has been known here for months past that the Seaboard designed to make use of its connections in South Carolina to get into Charleston. That, however, would not mean the abandonment of the plan to make Southpart a coaling station. The Seaboard is big enough to require two deep sea ports for its outlets and is so fortunately situated that it can secure both at comparatively little cost."

In view of the present and prospective importance of coaling stations on the South Atlantic, the citizens of Wilmington should make a united and persistent effort for a deep water project on the Cape Fear bar. Engineers have declared that if the necessity warranted it a depth of 40 feet can be secured on our bar. We should do some earnest work on the next Congress.

DR. ALDERMAN HONORED AT HOME.

The Charlotte Observer of yesterday makes this editorial reference:

"A worthy honor worthily bestowed was the conferring of the degree of Doctor of Laws upon Dr. Edwin A. Alderman by the University of North Carolina yesterday. Though by no means the first time this distinction has been accorded him, a peculiar significance attached to this occasion. The honor came this time from the institution of his native State, where in the days of his youth as a student he received his training and his inspiration, where later he was an enthusiastic member of the teaching force, and where later still he was for a number of years the tireless, devoted and successful head of the institution. He is a North Carolinian by birth, by breeding, by education, and his career of signal usefulness is to North Carolinians a source of genuine pride."

Dr. Alderman is a native of Wilmington and our city is proud of it. He has received numerous degrees from well known educational institutions in the United States, but as a native of North Carolina he will doubtless appreciate more highly than all the degree which comes from the chief educational institution of his own State.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—Any fool can catch on, but it takes a wise man to let go.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

—There are a good many reasons why New York should send Theodore Roosevelt to the United States Senate when his term as President expires. Platt and Depew are two of them.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

—From the cotton mills of Rhode Island to the mines of Nevada come reports of shortage of labor. No able-bodied loafer has any legitimate excuse for idleness in the United States this year.—Hartford Times.

—Secretary Bonaparte declares that battleships are as essential as universities to the welfare of the nation. Still, it would create some excitement if Mr. Rockefeller or Mr. Carnegie were to begin endowing battleships in the interest of higher education.—Washington Post.

—The platform adopted by the New York State Republican convention makes this demand: "Reduction of representation in the electoral college and in Congress to offset suppression of the elective franchise." And yet, Taft, Shaw and the rest of the Republican spellbinders express surprise that the South remains solidly Democratic.—Greensboro Telegram.

—It is said that the contract under which W. J. Bryan wrote for a syndicate during his tour of the world will yield him a net profit of $25,000 clear of traveling expenses of himself, wife, son and daughter. It must be said that Mr. Bryan's letters have been entertaining interesting and instructive. The Advertiser has published all of them that have yet been given out and will continue doing so until the last one appears.—Montogomery Advertiser.

—The President has suggested an income tax to discourage the human hog from wallowing too luxuriously in lucre. A companion measure should be a law preventing any actress from possessing at one time more than a half-gallon of diamonds other than those in active use. A section of the law should prohibit any actress from buying more diamonds after having lost two gallons of gems, and thereby given evidence of being incapable of taking care of them. Diamonds are already so high priced that many of the worthy poor cannot buy enough to go 'round, and such wastefulness as is exhibited by stage celebrities is criminal.—Louisville Courier Journal.

—In his address at the bankers' convention in Kentucky, Secretary Shaw proposed as a remedy for the evils of our independent treasury system that greater power for evil be lodged in it and the Secretary of the Treasury be made the dictator of banking. He would have the people "brought to recognize the Treasury somewhat in the nature of a great government bank and the National banks as branches thereof." Instead of criticising the present system as "awkard, cumbersome and uncouth," it would be better in his opinion "to accept it as the settled policy of the country and then improve it by clothing the Secretary of the Treasury with greater discretion and enlarged powers."—New York Journal of Commerce.

TWINKLINGS.

—No, somebody told him de mind works while we are asleep.—Chicago Daily News.

—Fiancee—How do you like my new shoes? Bobby (enthusiastically)—By Jove! They're immense!—Punch.

—Gritty George—What's de matter wid Dusty? He don't seem so anxious to sleep like he used to? Sandy Pikes

—"Did the old man settle anything on his daughter and her husband when they married?" "Yes, he did; he settled himself."—Baltimore American.

CATHOLIC REVIVAL

Successful Mission or Revival With the Church at Montague, N. C.—Conducted By Rev. Father Wm. Hannon, of Wilmington.

(Special Star Correspondence.)

Montague, N. C., Oct. 12.—A very successful mission or revival was conducted here by the Rev. Wm. Hannon assistant priest of Wilmington during the past eight days. The concluding exercises took place on Friday evening and it was a pretty sight to witness the altar ablaze with candles and each person who took part in the services held a lighted candle as they made a renewal of their Baptismal promises.

The evening sermons were for non-Catholics and all the controversial subjects were treated of, such as the Bible, confession, the true marks of the church, communion under one kind, etc.

The morning and mid-day services were for the benefit of the Catholics of the county. Three sermons were preached every day and were well attended. The utmost harmony prevailed amongst the different denominations attending.

MAKE CALLS AT NIGHT.

Peculiar Custom of the Arab Ladies of Zanzibar.

The Arab ladies of Zanzibar live in great seclusion in the large white houses, never going out in the daytime from one year's end to another, says the Manchester Guardian. A little cooking and sweetmeat making is their only recognized employment, though some few of them can do beautiful silk embroidery. To lie on their beds and be fanned by their slave girls is the usual occupation of the richer women.

If they want to visit their friends, or, as is more often the case, to perambulate the town, they wait until 8 o'clock in the evening, when a gun is fired warning all Mohammedans that it is the fifth and last hour of prayer; then they may go out. They are entirely enveloped in large mantles and their faces completely hidden by very ugly gilt masks, with oblong slits for the eyes, and many of them wear these even in the privacy of their own homes. Their other garments are trousers and a tunic reaching below the knee, which is often embroidered and trimmed with gold braid. They have a number of gold and silver ornaments, nose rings and earrings, bracelets, anklets, and so on.

They are very light in color, many of them cream colored. Their features are regular and good, and they have dark eyes and silky black hair. They paint under their eyes and stain their hands and nails a reddish color with senna. If they want to go any distance from home they ride through the narrow streets on large white asses stained a brick red, their slaves running by their sides, but you generally meet them stalking solemnly along, surrounded by their slaves, who carry enormous lanterns as big as a London street lamp.

Very often they do not return home till 4 in the morning, when another gun is fired proclaiming the first hour of prayer. It is very awkward at times when you meet in the streets some of these ladies whom you ought to know and are greeted by them. You cannot see their faces, it is not always easy to recognize a voice, and nothing would offend them more than to ask their names.

Danger from the Plague.

There's growing danger from the plague of Coughs and Colds that are so prevalent, unless you take Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Mrs. Geo Walls, of Forest City, Me., writes: 'It's a Godsend to people living in climates where coughs and colds prevail. I find it quickly ends them." It prevents Pneumonia, cures LaGrippe, gives wonderful relief in Asthma and Hay Fever, and makes weak lungs strong enough to ward off Consumption, Coughs, and Colds. 50c and $1.00. Raleigh Aldermen Wrestling With Problem Now On In Wilmington —Two Accidents Recorded— Wife of a Rector Escaped.

(Special Star Telegram.)

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 13: The Raleigh Aldermen this afternoon received the report of the special committee on the question of the cost of equipping a water plant for the city to take the place of the Wake Water Co., the franchise of which soon expires. The Aldermen have the alternatives of granting a new franchise to the present company, purchasing the plant at an appraised price, or installing a new municipal plant. The committee reported that it would cost $143,000 to build a city plant on Walnut Creek; $229.000 on Neuse river. The Wake Water Company asks $310,000 for its plant. The committee made no recommendation and action by the Board was deferred.

While attempting to jump on a moving freight train at the Jones and Sanders street crossing of the Seaboard Air Line, Master Earl Cutts, the twelve-year-old son of C. F. Cutts, fell under a car and had his left foot crushed off. Seaboard surgeons attended him and he is doing as well as could be expected.

At St. Mary's School last night gas formed in a defective furnaces in the rectory and came near asphyxiating Mrs. McNeely DuBose, wife of the rector of the school. The presence of the gas was detected by Dr. DuBose and the windows were thrown open before she was overcome. Mrs. DuBose was unconscious when found. The trouble with the furnace was remedied to-day.

How a Firm of Architects Got Its Name on a Building.

Close observation on the part of a newspaper man in Boston several years ago revealed a striking device employed by the firm of McKim, Mead & White, the noted New York architects, of which Stanford White, who was murdered by Harry K. Thaw in New York recently, was a member. The device, says the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, was an acrostic of names famous in history, literature and art by which the firm's name was to be engraved on the Boston Public library. As may be observed, the arrangement defied literature, history and philosophy in arrangement, and this was the thing that attracted the newspaper man's attention. The names were conglomerated from all nations and ages into a seemingly neat ornamentation for the fine building. Beginning at the top of a space to be devoted to names famous in the world in various lines were the following:

Moses,
Cicero,
Kalidasa,
Isocrates,
Milton.

These names, through their initials, formed the first part of the acrostic, spelling plainly "McKim." A slight space appeared before the next list of names, which was:

Mozart,
Euclid,
Aeschylus,
Dante.

The initials of these names brought out the second name of the firm, "Mead." Another slight space, and the following names appeared:

Wren,
Herrick,
Irving,
Titian,
Erasmus.

Here was the name "White" also engraved, the whole device bringing out the firm name of "McKim, Mead & White" in connection with the world's famed men. It was in 1890, just before the building was completed, that the discovery was made and published. The list of names was changed.

Ease and Fluency.

When Thiers was president of the French republic, he was about to issue some important manifesto and submitted the draft to a critical friend.

"Yes," said the critic, "the matter is clearly expressed, but I miss the ease and fluency of your usual style."

"Ah," replied Thiers, "I have not worked those in yet! The ease will cost me much labor, and the fluency I shall have to drag in by the hair of its head."

Never Recovered.

"You say you are a woman hater, Mr. De Smith?"

"Decidedly so," he replied. "In my youthful days a woman made a confounded fool of me, and"—

"You never got over it. I understand Mr. De Smith."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The New Suburb.

Mrs. Suburbs (with paper)—I see that the site of the garden of Eden has at last been located. Mr. Suburbs—Yes? When will the sale of lots take place, and what's the fare from the city hall? —Puck.

NO STRING TO LEADER WILLIAMS

Distinguished Mississippi Congressman Has Declined No Appointments to Speak—Will Be in North Carolina This Week.

(Raleigh News and Observer.)

Washington, D. C., October 11.—A story published to-day in a local paper to the effect that John Sharp Williams, Democratic leader in the House, had declined to fill speaking dates in New York on account of William R. Hearst, also that Mr. Williams had limited his services to the Democratic Congressional committee, brought forth a vigorous denial this afternoon from Chairman Griggs and Vice Chairman Bowers.

Upon their authority it can be stated that not only has Mr. Williams never declined any speaking engagement that the committee has made for him but he gave the committee to understand at the beginning of the campaign that his services were available without limitation or restriction. It was stated also that it was never the intention of the committee to send Mr. Williams to New York because there were other States in which his services can be devoted to better advantage—notably in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

Mr. Williams' first speaking assignments under the auspices of the committee will be in North Carolina, wher he is booked for three speeches next week. After this engagement he will probably go to Pennsylvania, where the Democrats are fighting for a gain of eleven Congressmen. ater Mr. Williams will make a number of speeches in Maryland. On account of his splendid ability as a debator there is a great demand for Mr. Williams.

FREAKS OF THE LAVA.

Some Curious Incidents of an Overflow of Vesuvius.

At one house, which had been entirely surrounded by the flood, but not destroyed, one saw people, on top of the mass of lava, entering the upper windows with a ladder and bringing forth their household goods to transport them to a place of safety. One vineyard was surrounded on three sides by this dividing current, and it was possible to walk into it among the lines of trimmed vines and to perceive the fire still glowing in the towering walls of lava on each side. The people attributed this remarkable phenomenon to the miraculous intervention of their Madonna, "Our Lady of the Snows," with whose sacred image they had confronted the all devouring monster sweeping implacably down on their apparently doomed homes.

Step by step the priests and the faithful, singing the litany, retreated as the awful flood swept on, and still the sound of singing and prayer rose above the fearful roar of the torrent and the thunder of the mountain above, belching forth from the central crater fiery bombs and enormous swirls of cinder, sand and smoke, which rose to great heights. Yard by yard the lava swept onward. Now a palatial villa would be surrounded by the torrent, crushed down and disappear in smoke; now a weeping peasant would see his little cottage and vineyard, his all, go under in an instant.

One poor woman was thus watching the fate of her earthly belongings from a little eminence when a smaller crater came roaring forth at her very feet. She turned to flee, fell, rolled to the bottom of the little hill, and the next moment the lava flowed forth like the foam from a glass of beer and swept over the spot where she had been standing an instant before.—William P. Andrews in Century.

The Earth's Three Motions.

The motion of the earth at the equator is equal to nearly 1,500 feet per second, and the earth has three motions—viz, the rotation on its axis in one day of twenty-four hours, the revolution around the sun in one year of 365¼ days and a very slow gyratory motion at the poles. This last mentioned motion is a very peculiar one and has not long been known. The poles move around the outside of a line at right angles to the plane of the ecliptic, coinciding with the line of axle rotation once in 25,868 years.

A Charming View.

Dawley (to the house agent)—I thought you said there was a charming view from the front windows. Why, there are only houses to be seen. House Agent—So there is a charming view, sir. In the house opposite lives the most beautiful widow you ever clapped eyes on, and she's always at the window.—London Fun.

Habit.

Habit is our primal fundamental law. Habit and imitation—there is nothing more perennial in us than these two. They are the source of all working and all apprenticeship, of all practice and all learning, in the world.—Carlyle.

Cutting.

Mrs. Enpeck—I think Mr. Mahlstick paints such lovely pictures. I think that I shall have him paint portraits of Henry and me together. Mrs. Cutting—Oh, I didn't know that he painted battle pictures.—Chicago News.

The Lesser Evil.

"I don't see how she could possibly be sillier—she giggles so constantly."

"Well, if she didn't giggle all the time she might talk, and perhaps that would be worse."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Stomach Trouble Cured.

THE SCHENCK CHEMICAL CO.,

Dear Sirs:—I had suffered from stomach troubles for nearly two years, and found relief from the many different patent medicines which I had tried. I was at last relieved of my trouble. When talking with a friend, Dandelion Tablets were recommended to me. After taking one box I felt relieved, and after using two boxes I was entirely well. I consider Dandelion Tablets the best medicine on earth for the stomach, and would highly recommend same to any one troubled with that unfortunate disease.

There's no use getting mad if that for sale sign you stuck on the front of your vacant house has not brought you a tenant or purchaser. Your sign has been read and reread by practically the same people, who pass by it every day and who are too intent on other things to stop and look over the property. Now, if you would advertise in the Business Locals of the Morning Star it would come before the eyes of all the people looking for real estate. This is because they are accustomed to have the Morning Star tell them what property in Wilmington may be had.

Mam'selle Celestine

CHATFIELD'S experience on Palmier island was necessarily an odd one. We always look for odd things when Chatfield is about, because he is fond of the unusual and takes pains to find it, but we were hardly prepared to hear of his teaching a school of brier root pipe colored children in Palmier.

It was one of his freaks, only a little wilder than the others. When his yacht was run down in the sound two years ago the newspapers were full of stories of his wealth, his travels, his adventures and hairbreadth escapes. That was the time they all called him David R. Chatworth, although everybody knows that his name is David H. Chatfield. They described him accurately enough as a tall young man of about twenty-four, with handsome dark hair and eyes, dark complexion, lithe and muscular, wearing a slight brown mustache.

The only trouble with Chat is that he has always had too much time and money to spare. He is a first rate fellow as it is, but with the advantage of poverty he might have become a great fellow. It is only fair to him to say that he does not bore his friends with stories of his adventures. We get these from the papers, and it is hard to make him retail them when we catch him at the club.

It was one of these newspaper stories about him, an Indian tiger hunting story, I think, that incidentally led to his Palmier experience. We were in Nassau, at the Royal Victoria hotel, and our party were gathered one morning on the eastern end of the big piazza—the end where the building is rounded off like the stern of a steamboat. We preferred that end because the trade wind gave us a cool breeze there every morning after breakfast. Somebody was reading the story out of an English newspaper, and Chat was particularly annoyed by it because "she" was there with us, and he did not like the notoriety.

The reader insisted upon reading the whole thing aloud, and when he concluded young Lloyd, who was looking over a Nassau paper published that morning, broke in with:

"I don't see what you want to be fooling with tigers and elephants for, Chat. Why don't you try something peaceable for a change? Now here's a chance for a nice quiet little adventure. Listen to this advertisement in the Nassau Guardian." And he read:

Wanted.—A schoolmaster for Palmier island; must be a classical scholar and competent to teach the higher mathematics; salary £40 per annum and the use of a dwelling house. Apply to the honorable the colonial secretary.

Chat laughed at the idea when we chaffed him about it, and it would have passed off harmlessly if "she" had not taken it up. That young person is a tease and fond of adventure herself, and she almost dared him to go down to Palmier and teach that school. Still Chat only laughed, and a few minutes later we set out for a sail to the sea gardens. But before the week ended Chat exploded a bomb by telling us quietly that he had seen the colonial secretary and had been appointed schoolmaster of Palmier island.

She was a little frightened at what she had done, I think, but she made no sign, and in a few days we all went down to the wharf to see Chat sail away in the mail schooner for Palmier. The mail schooner makes one round trip every month and is the only means of communication Palmier has with the rest of the world.

When the schooner landed Chat at Palmier most of the population were gathered about the little wharf to see him, to the number of 300 or 400, in all shades of color and all stages of undress—mostly shoeless, often hatless and coatless, and some little black shavers with nothing on but a look of expectancy in their faces. In front of them all was the resident magistrate, and you must know that the resident magistrate and the schoolmaster are the two great men of Palmier, the schoolmaster perhaps a little the greater because he is the only white man on the island.

The days are as much alike as the seasons in Palmier, and the arrival of a new schoolmaster is an important event. The people are all negroes, as I have said, with no more business than can be done in two or three little shops, and no occupation but gathering cocoanuts and shipping them away in the mail schooner and raising a few vegetables and catching fish and turtles. It is a terribly isolated island, but a beautiful one. There are no towering mountains to scrape the clouds with their green peaks. It is low, almost flat, and made up largely of white rock, with here and there a patch of red soil. But even the rocks are fertile, and from their crevices spring trees that bear a wealth of fruit and fragrant flowers the year through and bushes of gorgeous colors and sweet perfumes and mammoth ferns that tower among the trees.

The glory of the island is on its northern end, where from a smooth plain of white sand there grows an immense grove of giant cocoanut palms, their feathery tops so high that to look at them from below tires the neck, and so luxuriant that the grapevine branches meet, forming a green canopy through which the sun steals only here and there in narrow beams.

It is among these palms, under this rustling canopy, that the Palmier people live. Their little stone houses are scattered in confusion among the trees, with their thatched roofs and floors of hard clay and unglazed windows, half hidden by thickets of orange and lemon trees, limes, bananas, sugar apple, pawpaws, mangoes and tropical shrubs.

The houses are all much alike, and the schoolmaster's residence is no exception—four low stone walls topped with a thick roof of thatch, board shutters to the windows instead of glass, no chimneys, with two square rooms inside, a narrow strip of ground smoothed in front to answer for a piazza.

Chat was soon installed in this official residence, with a half grown boy who had been selected to serve him as housekeeper, cook and valet, and with his baggage lying in a confused heap in a corner of the inner room, the corner opposite the hammock. The gentle and simple Palmierians opened their eyes at sight of the big satchels and the dress suit case, the two strapped rugs and the steamer chair, the thick bundle of canes and the other of umbrellas, the leather dressing case, the mackintosh, the three top coats and the four large leather trunks. No schoolmaster had ever arrived with such an outfit before.

It was on the evening of his arrival that Chat first met Mam'selle Celestine. He was sitting out on his hard clay piazza smoking an after supper cigar and enjoying one of the sights for which Palmier is famous. All about among the trees were little fires (for the back yard is the Palmier kitchen), and each fire had its group of people, singing and dancing, some playing the violin and others at other fires playing the mouth organ, the concertina, the flute, the fife or the homemade drum. In this way every day is ended in Palmier, and the soft air was full of music and moonbeams and the rustling of palm leaves.

As he watched and listened he heard footsteps approaching, and in a moment a young woman appeared in the path. By the light from his open door he saw that she was a beautiful girl of perhaps twenty, with a great quantity of waving black hair fastened up in a Psyche knot on her uncovered head, with rich brown eyes that looked straight into his. She was much better clad than any of the islanders he had seen—in a well fitting gown of black and shoes that were not of island make. But more astonishing still were her fair complexion and her Caucasian mold of feature.

Chat stepped forward to speak, but the young woman anticipated him.

"Good evening, Monsieur Schoolmaster," she said, in a musical voice that gave him a start. "I have come to bid you welcome to Palmier. We have few strangers here, and the people cannot be expected to know how newcomers should be treated. They are kind people, but densely ignorant and superstitious. I hope they have made you comfortable?"

As Chat handed her his chair and reached for another he replied that he had been made exceedingly comfortable.

"I take such an interest in the school," his visitor continued, seating herself with the grace of a child of the tropics, "that I thought it best to come and make your acquaintance at once. My name is Celestine—Mam'selle Celestine, but the people find that too hard to pronounce, and shorten it to Mam. Celestine. And you are Mr. Chatfield? Yes, so I understand from the magistrate. I am glad to meet you, Mr. Chatfield, and you will probably be surprised to hear that it is largely through my agency that you have come here."

"The deuce it is!" Chat thought, but he answered politely:

"Indeed! I had no idea that I had such a friend at court."

"Of course not," Celestine replied, "but it is true. The school was not satisfactory to me under its late master and I found means to have him removed. I have plans for this little island that can be carried out best through the school. Il ne tient qu'a vous de reussir, but I have not come to tire you after your voyage. It is enough for one day that we have met. Before we meet again you will find that I have some influence in Palmier. Strange things happen sometimes, even on a little island like this. Adieu, Monsieur Chatfield."

"Good evening, Monsieur Schoolmaster," she said.

With a sweep of her skirt she was gone, and Chat sat for some moments looking after her.

"Undeniably handsome," was his conclusion; "apparently well bred; deucedly mysterious young person; certainly not a native of this island."

"George," he asked, when the boy was making the hammock ready for the night, "who is Mam. Celestine?"

"Oh, I—she—well, I cawn't edzactly say, sah, but she—she"—

"Well, out with it."

George looked cautiously about, and tiptoed to the door and closed it. Then he went up to his master and, with his hand to his mouth, whispered.

"She ketch shadder, sah!"

"Ah, ha!" Chatfield laughed. "That's it, is it? A shadow catcher, a jumbo woman, a hoodoo, an obi worshiper—is that it?"

"Sh-h-h!" George said, his finger upon his lips. "Berry bad to talk about dem t'ings, sah."

Chat was not disappointed with his surroundings when he began operations in the schoolhouse. He had visited such little tropical schools before in other parts of the world and knew what to expect. The clause about "the classics and higher mathematics" in the colonial secretary's advertisement had given him some amusement, for he was aware that nothing more classical than the second reader would require his attention, nor any mathematics higher than common fractions.

The building differed little from the dwelling houses except that it was in one room instead of two. There were the same stone walls, thatched roof, clay floor and unglazed windows. At one end of the room was a desk for the teacher, and in front of it the usual rows of desks and benches for the pupils—modern desks of hard wood and iron bought at government expense. In a corner near the teacher's desk, nailed to the wall, was a case containing the school library, almost the only books on the island except a few Bibles and hymn books. There were primers and readers in it, arithmetics, grammars, a Bible, a Bolmar's Sevizac, a big dictionary a set of Scott's novels and one or two guide books.

The pupils were in keeping with the schoolroom. No shade of darkness between yellowish white and the absolute black of the Kongo was missing. Among the sixty or seventy boys and girls there was not a single pair of shoes. Size made no difference in their attainments. Big brawny fellows and their big sisters struggled with the mysteries of the primer, while bright youngsters of half their age read glibly that "The—boy—picked—the—large—red—apple." It was the old story of the colored child in the tropics—quick and bright twelve, clouds hovering over the bro at sixteen, all the learning forgotten a twenty.

Before the first day was over there was a commotion in the neighborhood of one of the large boys. All the boys around him sprang from their seats and backed away from him in alarm.

"Mawster, Andy Inches 's got a white rooster's head in he pocket, sah!" one of them called out in a voice trembling with fear.

It instantly occurred to Chat that the white rooster's head is one of the favorite charms of the obi worker.

"Come up here, Andrew Inches," he said. "Empty out your pockets on my desk."

As the unwilling Andrew slouched up the aisle the pupils on both sides, boys and girls, drew back from him. One after another his pockets were emptied, and from the last one came the somewhat soiled and altogether unpleasant head of a fowl. It had once been white.

"Bah!" Chatfield exclaimed, taking it between his thumb and forefinger and throwing it through the open window. "What a horrid thing to carry in your pocket! I want to see you after school is dismissed, Andrew."

After school he called Andrew up to the front.

"Now, then, Andrew, I want to know what you mean by bringing that rooster's head to school."

Andrew's grandfather had been a Kongo, with three broad slits cut in each cheek. The boy had inherited the fine physique, the coal black skin, the rich brown eyes, full cheeks and thick black lips of his ancestors; perhaps some of their dogged courage, too, for he looked the master squarely in the eye and made no reply. But his big lips protruded till they were a half inch beyond his nose.

"Answer me, sir!"

Still no reply, but farther out went the lips.

"Will you answer?" Chat asked again, and still the boy stood like a black statue. The master raised the desk lid and took out the strap the government provided. It was the only argument the young Kongo understood.

"Oh, mawster, please let me go dis time, sah! Please don' lick me, sah! Please don'! Oh, please let me off, sah! I couldn' help it, sah; 'deed, 'deed I couldn'! I had to bring it, sah; I had to do it!" He was less statuesque now.

"Then tell me why you had to bring it," Chat said threateningly.

Instantly the boy resumed his former attitude, with his eyes again fixed upon the schoolmaster's, glaring a defiance that plainly said, "You may kill me, but I'll never answer that question."

It was an unpleasant moment for Chat, for nothing would have induced him to strike one of his pupils; yet it seemed necessary to subdue the defiant boy in some way. While he rapidly considered what to do, a faint odor of orange blossoms was wafted into the schoolroom, there was the swirl of a white skirt in the doorway and Mam'selle Celestine was in the aisle.

"My, my, my!" she exclaimed as she advanced toward the teacher's desk. She was smiling and radiant. "Trouble on the first day? Behold the culprit, for I am the guilty one, not the boy. It was I gave him the fowl's head to carry. He had to bring it. He could not possibly do anything but obey me. Won't you, please, Mr. Schoolmaster, (and she laid her hand gently upon Chat's arm and looked bewitchingly into his eyes), won't you please let him go this time? He shall not trouble you again."

Glad of any excuse for dismissing the lad, Chat told him to go home, and the next minute he regretted it, when he realized that he had given the defiant Andrew some reason to believe that Mam'selle Celestine's uncanny charms could influence him.

"Forgive me for giving you that little trouble," Celestine said, when the boy had gone. "It was only intended to show the truth of what I have said to you. You remember my telling you that I have considerable influence here. If I give every one of your pupils a charm to carry to school, they would all bring them. They could not help themselves; and if you were to beat them with clubs they would not tell you where they got them nor why they carried them. At a word from me not one of your pupils would dare enter the door.

"But pshaw!" she went on, throwing herself gracefully into the nearest seat. "It is almost a shame to practice upon these ignorant children. I do not often do it, except through their equally ignorant parents. I delight in dealing with their parents. Ha, ha! Who is the most intelligent among them? The magistrate, is he not? One of my innocent amusements is making the magistrate draw a circle around himself in the sand before he dare enter his own door. Watch him some day, and see if he doesn't."

Chat stood looking down at the beautiful young woman in astonishment while she was speaking. When she concluded, he seated himself on the opposite side of the aisle and with great deliberation took out his cigar case.

"Do you object to my smoking?" he asked.

"Not in the least," she replied. "I enjoy it. I am rather partial to cigarettes myself, but always in private."

"Now, mam'selle," Chat said after slowly and thoroughly lighting his cigar, "I see that you are a very intelligent young lady, and"—

"Merci, monsieur," Celestine interrupted, with a mock bow and another of her bewitching smiles.

"And I trust that you will give me credit for some little intelligence myself," he continued. "At any rate, I have seen something of the world. Allow me to ask you, do you really expect me to believe in your charms and witchery, your rooster's heads and pretended shadow catching?"

"Ah!" Celestine exclaimed, with another of her rippling laughs. "I have caught a shadow already! Did I say anything to you about catching shadows? Oh, no. Some one has been telling you of my powers. Seriously, all that I have asked you to believe is my simple statement that I have considerable influence over the people of this island—in plain words, that they are afraid of me. You have seen something of it. Beyond that you need believe no more than you choose. Still, many people of the world believe in these things. I have met in Scotland, in Paris"—

"Then you have traveled," Chat interrupted.

"Oh, mon Dieu!" she answered. "Do you imagine that I have spent my life in this place? I could not endure it if it were not for my influence over the people. In Paris—n'avez vous point ete la?—ah, there is life; there is beauty; there is pleasure! Je n'y pense plus. I dare not; it would drive me wild. Even in Scotland, dear, quiet old Scotland, the home of my ancestors, there was more of life than here. And yet—and yet here is ease, here is comfort, here is warmth and here is power in a small way if one takes it right—power, Mr. Chatfield. And power is always sweet, however slight it may be."

"We are drifting from the subject, mam'selle," Chat replied. "But no matter. I think I may depend upon you not to interfere with my pupils. I cannot have their heads filled with superstitious stuff."

"Have no fears, Mr. Chatfield," she said, while the schoolmaster made preparations to leave; "but remember that I am not a woman here, but a witch. I am Mam. Celestine, the obi woman, the sorceress, the shadow catcher, the fetich worker. Ne suis je pas? Adieu, monsieur. I see your shadow already creeping into the bottle."

Chat closed the schoolhouse and walked slowly home with his hands in his pockets. "I am glad the girl is full of this witchcraft nonsense," he said to himself. "She is beautiful and in many ways attractive, and if she were like other women I should be afraid of her."

For some days the new master struggled to set his school in order, classifying, explaining, questioning. He was determined to do some good to his pupils and to spare no pains with them. Mam'selle Celestine visited the school occasionally, but gave no further proofs of her alleged powers, and he was beginning to think that little danger past when it showed itself again in new form. This time it came through the resident magistrate, who called early one morning and begged, almost insisted, that Chat should go with him to Mam. Celestine's that evening. Some one had "set obi" for the pastor of the little chapel, the only clergyman on the island, and Mam. Celestine had promised to take it off. Three persons must be present, and the witch woman had declared that the pastor, the magistrate and the schoolmaster should be the three. Since obi had been set for him the pastor's animals had died, his child had fallen ill, his fruit had been stolen, everything had gone wrong, and it would be an act of mercy to help him out of his trouble. Chat reluctantly consented to go, thinking that he might be able to show the magistrate the folly of the performance.

When the magistrate called for the schoolmaster that evening he had the pastor with him. It was after 9 o'clock, and the fires were out, the music and dancing ended, and Palmier was asleep. Mr. Sweeting, the preacher, was a tall, gaunt negro of nearly sixty, with black hair and a thin growth of snow white beard under his chin. His feet were shoeless, and his clothing was of the island pattern, except for a long black coat that set awkwardly upon him. Silently the three followed paths under the palms until they were within a stone's throw of Celestine's house, and then the preacher paused.

"Stop, friends," he said. "Let me have a minute with my Maker befo' we go in."

He stepped aside a few paces, and a moment later they saw him on his knees beside a giant palm, his clasped hands high above his head, the moon shining full upon his upraised face. Chat shuddered to see this Christian minister invoking heaven's blessing upon the mummery that he thought was to release him from a witch's spell. Next minute they knocked at Celestine's door.

The young obi woman answered the summons and with a sweep of her arm invited them to enter. She took them through the first room into a second, where seven or eight candles were burning, all short ends but one. Thick curtains hung over the closed windows, and in the center a corked bottle was suspended from the roof by a cord. Immediately under the bottle was an armchair, with a banjo lying in it, and three other chairs stood against the wall. Between the windows was a low cushion, upon which lay a coal black cat, and beside the cushion a saucer half full of water.

"Be seated, gentlemen," Celestine said. Her appearance was exactly the opposite of what Chat had expected. Instead of wearing the gaudy, bespangled dress usually affected by obi workers on such occasions, she was clad from head to foot in black, with no ornament but a small brooch at her throat.

As the three took the chairs to which she pointed the cat walked over and rubbed its head and sides against their legs, then returned to its cushion.

"This is a time of rejoicing, gentlemen," Celestine said, taking up the banjo and seating herself in the armchair. "A holy man is about to be released from the power of evil. We must rejoice with music and dancing. Your shadow has been caught, Mr. Sweeting, but I have been strong enough to recover it. See!" And she pointed to the bottle suspended above her head. "I cannot release it without dancing. You must dance the evil power under your feet. When I play you must dance, and you shall be delivered."

She began twanging the banjo, making at first a few weird, mournful sounds, which gradually grew louder and faster till they melted into a lively dancing tune, surprisingly like a jig. She nodded her head toward the preacher, keeping time with the music, and he arose and took a step or two, as though testing the quality of his age stiffened muscles. Perhaps the music and the motion revived long buried memories of earlier years. He was soon in full motion, round and round Celestine's chair. Faster and faster went the music; faster and faster flew the preacher. The magistrate looked on with awe, and Chat hardly knew whether to be indignant or to laugh.

Gradually one candle after another burned out, leaving the room in semi-darkness. Suddenly the music ceased for an instant while Celestine reached up and seized the bottle, pulled it from its fastening and hurled it against a corner of the wall, where it broke into a thousand pieces.

"Dance them down; dance them down!" she exclaimed, going on with the music. The preacher continued his furious dance around her chair. And the black cat, aroused by the noise, walked over to the broken bottle and smelled the pieces. On its way back to the cushion it stopped to lap up water from the saucer.

When the last candle but one had expired the music ceased and the preacher sank into his chair exhausted.

"It is accomplished, gentlemen," Celestine said, rising and throwing open the door, for the atmosphere was stifling, "but not without some sacrifice. See!"

She bent over the cat and gently picked it up by the back of the neck, but it made no movement. The cat was dead and growing stiff.

When the clergyman opened his mouth to thank her for her good offices Celestine silenced him by raising her hand warningly, and not another word was spoken. Silently they were bowed out and silently they separated, for Chat was too wise to expostulate with the others while they were awe stricken with what they had seen. He realized that Celestine had cunningly arranged the whole performance for his benefit, to show not only that the magistrate and the preacher were in her power, but that her power over them was strong enough to compel the aged pastor to spend a half hour in dancing.

"Poor cat!" he said to himself. "It was a handsome cat too. Of course, the water in the saucer was poisoned. A few Brinvilliers leaves soaked in the water beforehand did the business for pussy."

For weeks after this Chatfield had no more direct contact with obi-ism, though he saw and felt its influence about him. Plainly the people were afraid of Mam'selle Celestine. It was not easy to talk with the magistrate or with the pastor about it, for the moment he mentioned the uncanny subject they became silent as the grave. That a Christian minister should be a believer in it was disgusting to him, but it did not surprise him, because he had seen the curious combination of Christianity and obi-ism in other countries.

Meanwhile he saw more than ever of Mam'selle Celestine; so much that it dawned even upon his masculine mind that so many meetings could not be altogether accidental. He was not displeased that she made frequent visits to the school, that he met her almost daily on the beach, under the palms, in the little shops, wherever he went. She was a beautiful young woman, the only companionable person on the island, and he could not help taking an interest in her. Walking on the beach one evening, the beautiful white beach, shining under the full moon, she suddenly appeared.

"Beware of your shadow!" she laughed. "It is very plain on this white sand, and you know there are shadow catchers about."

"That is a fair challenge for you," Chat replied. "There is a glorious shadow ten or twelve feet long. Catch it if you can."

"It is not shadows I want to talk about tonight," she said, "but realities. I am not always dealing with shadows."

"I wish you would never have anything to do with them at all," Chat retorted.

"Pshaw!" she exclaimed. "Shadows! I need not tell you what I think of shadow catching and all the rest of the obi stuff. You must know why I practice upon the credulity of these ignorant people, but you do not know the whole of my plan. That is what I want to tell you tonight. You remember I told you at the beginning that I was the cause of the old schoolmaster's leaving. It was very simple—a word here, some bottles hung there, a rooster's head or two in front of the magistrate's door, and I could have removed a dozen schoolmasters.

Faster and faster went the music.

"But that was only a beginning," she went on. "You have seen what I can do with your pupils and what I can do with the magistrate and the preacher. Those two are the only men on the island who have even the pretense of knowledge, always excepting yourself. Where they go the others follow. Every man, woman and child on this island is afraid of obi. I made the poor old preacher dance merely to show you how completely I can control him. They think themselves Christians, these foolish people, and a child could make them worship a bit of broken glass. It is not for the sake of seeing them dance, surely, that I manage them. I want better things of them than that."

"And what is it you want of them?" Chat asked. "What is the plan you speak of?"

"I want my own little kingdom in the sea!" Celestine replied, more gravely than he had ever heard her speak. "I want these people to fear me and work for me and supply my needs and build a fine house for me—oh, much finer than anything they have here now—and to know that I am the mistress of them all. I shall be their queen, with greater power here than the real queen, who is only a dream to them. You know how far Palmier is from anywhere. If they appoint a new magistrate I shall bring him into subjection; a new minister, I shall awe him. I am determined upon it."

"Why do you unfold this to me?" Chat asked. "You know I do not believe in such things."

"Believe!" Celestine exclaimed. "It is not necessary for you to believe except in me. We are both young, and we understand each other. I offer you an equal share in the glory and the power if you will give me your influence in the school. The school is the only thing I have to fear. The older people I can control; the younger ones I want brought up to believe in me. The old master would not do it, and I had him removed. With your help in the school you and I can manage this island as completely as though we had an army here. Songez-y serieusement. Do not answer me now. Take days, weeks. There is comfort to be had here in the way I propose that can be had nowhere else."

Before Chat could reply Celestine was gone, and he was alone on the beach. Her words had made an impression upon him, but not in the way that she intended. Her French continued to ring in his rears. Her French pronunciation had always amused him, but she was able to make herself understood. That day, however, he had been turning the pages of the Sevizac in the little school library, wondering what could have induced a school board to send a French grammar to Palmier, and some of the translated exercises had seemed strangely familiar to him. He was sure now that he had heard one of them read within a few minutes.

Mr. and Mrs. John Eugene Clay have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter. Anahas, to Mr. Seldon Bryan Jones, the wedding to take place on Tuesday, October 23rd, at 6:30 o'clock at their home, 39 West North Avenue. Atlanta, Ga. The groom-elect is well remembered here as he once made his home in this city, and the bride to be also has many friends in this city, as she has visited Wrightsville Beach for the past several seasons.

Last week, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Scott. 19 North Seventh street, the seventieth anniversary of the birthday of Mr. Samuel G. Hall was appropriately observed. A large cake, around which several candles burned, was the centerpiece of the table, which was the attraction to the little grandchildren, who enjoyed to the fullest extent "grandpa's birthday party." Quite a number of friends dropped in during the evening to wish Mr. Hall many happy returns.

One of the most brilliant society events of the season was the opening night at the sixth annual exhibition of the Richmond Horse Show Association. The building was lighted with countless numbers of electric lights and never before have the boxes been so well fixed and the occupants so gorgeously gowned.

Some of those at the show who are known here were:

Miss Lucy Bridgers, who was beautifully dresser in white chiffon, with a large black velvet hat with white and black plumes, and a white feather boa. Mrs. William Ruffin Cox was beautifully gowned in black velvet, en a black velvet hat encircled with pink roses completed the costume.

princesse, with berthe of duchess lace,

At quarter past six o'clock on Tuesday, Miss Henrie Emma Walker will be united in marriage to Mr. William Dougal McCaig, in Grace Methodist church. The church will be simply, but prettily decorated for the nuptials and the bride will be robed in a going away gown. The bridal party will consist of Mrs. C. L. Dickinson, the bride's sister, as dame of honor, who will be her only attendant; Mr. Malcom R. Chatwood, of Atlanta, Ga., will be best man; Mr. J. H. Tench, Gainesville, Fla., Mr. David B. Sinclair, Mr. R. Bruce McCaig, and Mr. Jno. M. Wiggins, ushers. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCaig will start on their wedding trip of a month, going via. Washington, D. C., Cincinnati, Chicago, Salt Lake, Denver, and thence to San Francisco.

The cozy and well appointed home of Mr. and Mrs. Reuben H. Pickett was beautifully decorated by Rehder, with Southern smilax, ferns, potted plants in bloom. with here and there handsome palms and cut flowers, the whole making a most fitting and appropriate decoration for the celebration of the Twenty-fifth anniversary, last evening, of the marriage of the happy couple who had invited their friends to join with them in their pleasure. Guests were received at the portals of the Pickett home by sweet girl friends whose pleasure it was to usher them in the drawing rooms where Mr. and Mrs. Pickett received their friends thanking them for their expressions of good will and best wishes. In the receiving line were also Mrs. Pickett's sister, Mrs. James B. Dempsey, her brothers, Mr. William W. Hodges, Captain and Mrs. William P. Oldham and the venerable Mrs. Martha J. Hodges, who pleasantly divided honors with her daughter. Very beautiful and tempting refreshments were served and the idea of the silver wedding was most cunningly carried out in the decorations and refreshments. The evening was one of much real pleasure and enjoyment, the guests departing carrying with them pleasant memories.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

MISS MILDRED HOLLAND,

the Charming and Deservedly Popular Theatrical Star, writes as follows:

"I am delighted with Newbro's Herpicide. It is just what I have been looking for. I find that it not only prevents dandruff, but that it stops the hair from falling out. It is a most delightful hair dressing, and no lady's toilet table is complete without it." (Signed) MILDRED HOLLAND.

A woman to be pretty must have pretty hair. There is a subtle charm about beautiful hair that lends more to personal adornment than all of the skill of all of the "beauty doctors" combined. The hair need not be of extraordinary or abnormal length, but it must have that distinctiveness of appearance that comes from intelligent care, and is the result of perfect hair health.

The most cultured ladies in every community use Newbro's Herpicide; and when you see a head of hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life, it is a fairly good indication that Newbro's Herpicide has been used.

A common cause of dullness of the hair is the presence of fine dust and soot in the streets that is kept in constant motion by trolley car, automobiles, etc. This fine dust—frequently laden with disease germs—adheres to the hair and dulls its natural luster.

A delightful way to cleanse and beautify the hair is to moisten a cloth with Nembro's Herpicide and draw it carefully through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. It may be done daily, or less often, as desired.

The result of this cleansing process will prove a surprise, not only in the amount of dirt removed, but in the added beauty of the hair and the sense of cleanliness and comfort that follows. Shampooing will also remove this dust, but too frequent washing of the hair is harmful.

Newbro's Herpicide is the Original remedy that "kills the dandruff germ." It eradicates dandruff and stops falling hair. It is the only real scalp prophylactic in existence. A delightful and refreshing hair dressing. Stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

I. O. R. M. CEREMONIES.

Arrangements Nearing Completion For Impressive Affair.

The committee which has in charge the arrangements for the imposing ceremonies which will mark the laying of the corner-stone of the handsome new Red Men's Home, on North Front street, have everything well in hand and the indications are that the exercises will be a success in every particular. The Acme Male Quartette and the Post Artillery Band from Fort Caswell have been engaged to assist with the musical features. Watcoosa Tribe, of Fort Caswell, will attend the ceremonies in a body and a parade of all the tribes from the present wigwam will be a feature.

As before announced Great Incohonee Thos. K. Donnalley, of the Supreme Council, who instituted Eyota Tribe in this city 15 years ago, will be the principal speaker. The Great Sachem of the State writes Chairman J. R. Davis, of the Committee, that he will endeavor to have all the Chiefs of the Great Council here to participate in the exercises of the corner-stone laying. The visitors on this occasion will be entertained on the Sound and at the beaches during their stay in the city.

CHANGE AT WEATHER BUREAU.

Mr. R. A. Dyke, Assistant Observer, Transferred to Burlington, Vt.

Mr. R. A. Dyke, who for nearly two years past has been the very capable assistant observer in the Weather Bureau in Wilmington, has been transferred to the station at Burlington, Vt., and expects to leave to-morrow morning for that city. Mr. Dyke is succeeded here by Mr. Harold McCleland, of Burlington, who has already arrived and will enter at once upon his new duties.

Mr. Dyke is a West Virginian by birth but has seen considerable service with the Weather Bureau having been stationed for some time at Galveston and other important points in the country. He has made many friends in Wilmington who regret exceedingly to see him leave. He has taken a prominent part in the young people's work of the church and has a number of friends socially. Mr. McCleland, who will succeed Mr. Dyke, arrived yesterday morning and has already received a cordial welcome to the city.

OPPOSITION TO THE DRAW.

Petitions Against Proposed Obstruction Being Liberally Signed.

The petitions gainst the proposed draw in the trestle over the Banks Channel at Wrightsville Beach are being liberally signed not only by residents at the Sound and at the Beach but also by many citizens of Wilmington, who see in the proposed contrivance not only a great hindrance to travel but a very great element of danger. Hardly a week passes but the press dispatches from the North, where there is a real necessity for such draws, chronicle such accidents as a trolley car or railway train plunging through a draw with loss of life in many instances and great property loss in any case. The necessity for a draw in Wrightsville has never been shown except technically and the public generally is opposed to anything which will impair the schedules or introduce into the travel the least element of danger.

The hearing before the District Engineer will take place in his office in the Postoffice Building in this city on Thursday of this week at noon, and the result will be watched with interest.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Bryan left yesterday for Conway, S. C., which will be their home in the future.

—Mr. J. N. Chestnut, of Rocky Point, was among yesterday's visitors in the city.

—Mr. W. L. Corbett, of Pender county, was in the city yesterday and favored the Star with a very pleasant call.

—Mrs. J. P. Hopewell left yesterday for Kinston and Greenville, N. C., where she will be the guest of friends and relatives.

—A. K. Powers, Esq., is in the city on his way to New Orleans, La., and points in Mississippi where he goes on legal business.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Skipper, of New York, who have been spending five weeks in Wilmington, the guests of friends and relatives, returned home on the Clyde Liner Carib, which sailed yesterday afternoon.

—Capt. Robert Green is back from the Central Carolina Fair at Greensboro. Capt. Green met many old friends from different parts of the State at the Fair and was well pleased with his trip.

—Southport Herald: "Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fredericks, of Philadelphia, are here on a visit to Miss Kate Stuart after an absence of twenty-three years. Their old friends are greeting them at every turn. They think our town much improvel."

—Mr. J. A Stone, of Little River, S. C., was here yesterday. Mr. Stone recently purchased the derelict schooner Cassie F. Bronson, and his visit to Wilmington yesterday was for the purpose of seeing what arrangements can be made to get the vessel afloat.

MARRIED IN BALTIMORE.

Miss Martha Lee Horn Bride of Prominent Marylander.

Mrs. J. F. Garrell and Miss Lillian Horne have returned from Baltimore, where on Wednesday evening of the past week at St. Michael's All-Angels' Episcopal church, in that city, they attended the marriage of Miss Martha Lee Horne, of this city, and Mr. James Smith Longfellow, a prominent young business man of Maryland. The ceremony took place in Baltimore on account of the serious illness of the groom's mother, whom he was loth to leave for any great distance, the wedding in that city being at the request of Mr. Longfellow. It is described as having been a very pretty affair indeed, the beautiful Episcopal service having been used by the rector of the parish.

Mr. and Mrs. Longfellow expect to spend the Winter in Wilmington and will arrive here the last of the present month. They will be at home at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Guilford Horne, on Red Cross street.

Brunswick Committee to Meet.

The Democratic County Executive Committee of Brunswick is called by Dr. T. V. Moore, the chairman, to meet at Southport tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Legislature, vice Capt.. J. J. Adkins, who declines to make the race on account of pressing business engagements. The committee invites all Democrats who care to attend to be present and advise with them. Among the candidates spoken of for the place are Messrs. A. C. Meares and Howard C. Curtis, Esq.

The "City of Fayetteville."

The steamer City of Fayetteville, which has been tied up in Wilmington for a month or two having her boilers replaced by those of the old Highlander, which were recently recovered from the river near Georgetown, S. C., where the steamer burned, will be put in commission again this week. It is understood that Mr. S. P. McNair will have charge of the affairs of the steamer at this end of the line. The old boilers in the boat were too expensive to steam for the river operation. A number of other improvements have also been made to the "Fayetteville."

MADAME DEARTH.

Expert Corsetaire to Visit Wilmington.

The announcement that Madame Dearth, expert corset fitter, is soon to visit Wilmington, will be received by the ladies of this city with genuine pleasure. She is no stranger here, having made many friends for herself and the LaGrecque corsets, while demonstrating at Platt and Haar's last Spring.

The demonstration begins October 15th and continues for two weeks, during which time an invitation is extended to the ladies to visit The Little Store and find out the corset best adapted to their figure and best suited from a standpoint of health.

When Madame Dearth was here last February she demonstrated that the LaGrecque corset is the best corset ever carried in Wilmington. Every lady who is not yet a LaGrecque wearer should call and be fitted by Madame Dearth. Demonstration takes place in the fitting room annex to cloak and suit department. **

LOCAL DOTS.

—The regular convocation of Concord Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M., will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

—The Piano Club will meet Monday night at 8 o'clock in the Luther Memorial Building at Sixth and Princess streets.

—License was issued yesterday for the marriage of Mr. J. E. Parker, of Wilmington, and Miss Ada Singleton, daughter of Mrs. Mary Singleton, also of this city. The ceremony will be performed at 10 o'clock this morning at the home of the bride, No. 116 Dock street.

—Cars will be run to the beach on a half hour schedule this afternoon. The line is open over the trestle as far as Station 5 and those who have not had the opportunity before will find this an excellent time to see the ruins of the recent storm. The first car since the storm came over the trestle yesterday. It was No. 31, which was stanrded on the Hammocks on the day of the blow.

Real Estate Transfers.

By deeds filed for record yesterday Thos. D. Meares, Jr., transferred to W. P. Gafford, M. G. Silvia and A. C. Skipper, for $100, property on north side of Meares, 35 feet west of Front street; W. M. Cumming and wife transferred to W. R. K. Slocumb, for $1,650, property on south side of Queen, 165 feet west of Second street, 70x99 feet in size, and on west side of Anderson, 66 feet north of Gwynn street, 33x100 feet in size; S. M. Empie, commissioner transferred to W. M. Cumming for $505, property on south side of Church, 81 feet west of Sixth street, 27x90 feet in size, and Miss Eliza G. French transferred to Jas. E. Water Works Analysis.

Elsewhere in to-day's paper will be found the report of the analysis of the filtered water of the Clarendon Water Works Co., which is now being served to patrons in abundant supply. The analysis is by the chemist of the North Carolina Board, who under an act of the Legislature, is required to make an analysis of every public water supply in North Carolina each month. What he says as to the relative merits of the drinking water now furnished and that elsewhere in this section of the State will be found quite assuring.

Y. M. C. A. Meetings.

Rev. J. M. Wells, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will be the speaker at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. at 5 o'colck, this afternoon. His subject will be "The Young Man and Business," and those who hear the speaker may be assured of something good. Miss Mary Black will contribute a soprano solo to the musical programme for the afternoon. Dr. Akerman, president of the Association, will speak to the boys at their meeting at 10 o'clock in the morning.

With Julius P. Taylor.

Mr. Frank S. Shepard, a clever young Wilmingtonian who numbers his friends by the score and who has been with the City Livery Company for a number of years, has taken a position as salesman with Julius P. Taylor, the clothier and furnisher on Princess street. Mr. Shepard will begin his new duties to-morrow and is well qualified to look after the interests of the firm, which is already one of the most popular in town.

Slashed Up at Bolton.

A Mr. Burney, an employe of the Waccamaw Land and Lumber Co., at Bolton, N. C., was severely cut across the breast by a negro at the station there last night. Particulars of the disturbance could not be learned. The negro used a razor and made good his escape. Mr. Burney was brought to the hospital in this city on the late train from Florence last night.

Adjutant Wiggins Will Speak.

The services at Brooklyn Baptist church to-day will be conducted by Adjutant Wiggins, of the Salvation Army. Adjutant Wiggins is soon to leave the city and the services will be the last opportunity many people will have of hearing him.

Died of Diphtheria.

of a foreign vessel. They also argued that if Byrnes and Flynn were to be believed, it was a case of general shanghaing and presented a serious phase.

Mr. Carr made light of the shanghaing proposition and argued that it was a simple, ordinary case of desertion and that the men should be turned over to the ship's officers.

After hearing all sides of the case, Mayor Waddell decided to discharge Lusk from custody, to hold Brynes and Flynn until the U. S. S. Columbia is communicated with and to turn Roschman over to the master of the Osceola.

DESERTER ARRESTED.

Man Wanted at Fort Caswell Arrested in Kinston, N. C.

Kinston, N. C., Oct. 12.—Chief Carson Heath, Thursday captured John Carter, a young man who deserted from the United States army over four years ago, and for whom the officer had been looking for 18 months. Carter was working at the Kinston cotton mills when captured and came here from Dunn about two weeks ago. Since deserting Carter has married and his wife lives in the city now.

Carter was placed in the station house for safekeeping. Thursday night and this morning when Officer John Howland went to take him out to carry him to Fort Caswell near Wilmington, to turn him over to the government, Carter had a severe attack of cramp colic and took on mightily. City Health Officer Hargrove was summoned and after a careful diagnosis discovered the trouble to be an acute case of bluff. Upon the finding of the physician Carter's case got better immediately.

Mayor's Court Yesterday.

John Lawson, the watchman, who was arrested Friday morning for raising a disturbance in Baggett Brothers' store, on South Front street, was fined $10 and costs in the Mayor's court yesterday. L. W. Shell, a colored preacher charged with digging sand in the street near Sixth and Nixon, was discharged as the matter was regarded as frivolous by the Mayor. Dan Lowery, drunk, was ordered to leave the city. L. W. Noble, charged with being disorderly at the Delmonico Cafe, was dicharged. Other cases were of no interest.

Noe, of the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, and the soloist will be Miss Annie Adrian. Familiar hymns will be sung and hymn books provided.

Disorder on Train.

Capt. W. H. Newell, Jr., in charge of the train arriving here early this morning from Florence, had a desperate encounter with several drunken toughs whom he had occasion to call down in the smoking compartment of the car soon after leaving Fair Bluff last night. One of the men, reported to be the son of Town Marshal Edmonds, of Chadbourn, made a lunge at the conductor with a knife and severely cut Conductor Newell on both hands. The baggage master of the train, who went to the assistance of the conductor, was slashed across the coat sleeve but was not seriously hurt. The man with the knife was turned over to the town marshal at Chadbourn by Conductor Newell, the officer, as stated, being the young man's father.

NEGRO COLLEGE BLOWN UP

Some South Carolinian Put Dynamite Under It.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Columbia, S. C., October 13.—A special to the State from Anderson says: word was received here to-day from Seneca that Harrell College, a negro institution here, was blown up by dynamite last night. Rev. J. F. Williams, a negro is the president of the college and it was supported by Northern people. He went to Seneca from Abbeville several years ago and it is said he has made himself objectionable to the white people. He has advised the negroes, it is said not to work for the white people. A letter of warning was sent him several weeks ago advising him to leave Seneca but he ignored it.

Dynamite cartridges were placed under each corner of the college building last night by unknown parties and when the clock struck midnight the dynamite was exploded. The building was partially wrecked.

Ran Into Carts.

There were two slight accidents on the Consolidated line on Princess street yesterday. About 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon City Car No. 12. Motorman Darden, ran into a city cart in charge of Driver Crandall and slightly injured him besides breaking a shaft of the vehicle. The accident was at Second and Princess. About 5 o'clock near Front and Princess Car No. 10 in charge of Motorman Pete Merritt, ran into a delivery wagon of C. D. Gilbert & Bro. The vehicle was slightly damaged. The negro driver escaped injury.

WILMINGTON'S WATER SUPPLY.

Raleigh, N. C., October 6, 1906.
Mr. William F. Robertson Wilmington, N. C.
Dear Sir:—

I enclose herewith analysis of your two samples of water forwarded under date of October 1st. As you will see, the analysis of your filtered water indicates a very good and pure water. In fact no better water can be found in the central or eastern part of the State. The water still shows a slight tinge of color, which I think can be eventually removed, after your filter has been in operation long enough to give your attendants some experience in handling it. In regard to the suggestion contained in a recent Wilmington newspaper as to sinking one or more artesian wells in your city, my opinion is, that while clear and sparkling water can be had from such wells, yet the water will be so extremely hard and contain such a large amount of iron and dissolved mineral matter that the water would be undesirable for domestic uses. It would be almost totally worthless for laundry purposes and for steam boilers and other industrial uses.

Beginning with your next sample we will report the color in figures according to the platinum cobalt standard. This will enable you to compare directly successive samples and the filtered with the raw water.

Your very truly,
GERALD McCARTHY,
Biologist.

Geo. O. Gaylord's Fall Opening
IN MILLINEYR
Dress Goods, Cloaks and Clothing

Our Millinery Department has made special preparations to show the ladies a treat in head wear. Our stock in this department was never larger. Our head milliner, Miss Brown, and Miss Smith, our head saleslady, have recently returned from New York and Philadelphia where they spent three weeks visiting the large retail openings of those cities taking advantage of all the latest styles on exhibition.

Our pattern hats, as well as the untrimmed stock, will be marked down at the very lowest prices, and we trim all hats free that are brought to us.

We also carry a large stock of new hat frames which have been carefully selected and which you can have made to your order.

Our millinery department is on the same floor with our cloaks, waists and skirts. In this department you will also find our underwear for women and children. This stock you will find very strong and we have all the styles which you may desire.

Our dress goods and silk department is on our first floor, and in this department we have better salespeople than ever before.

Ladies who are visiting the Millinery Opening, I will be glad to have stop and see our dry goods and dress goods departments.

We have a large quantity of new Fall goods on display and to buy your dress goods from us will be a saving to you. We have also an extensive display in trimmings, buttons and braids.

Our lining department represents all the colors, all styles of fine material used by dressmakers.

Our cloak department has been nicely arranged on a floor to themselves. We carry an immense line of cloaks for both retail and wholesale.

The department is in the charge of two of our young ladies who will do their best in showing you through the department and in pleasing you. You will also see in this department a big line of furs of the very latest styles ranging in price from $1.00 to $15.00 each.

Remember the days of the Opening is Tuesday and Wednesday, October 9th and 10th, and beginning at 9.00 A. M. and closing at 7 P. M.

We will have music each day.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE

—A government architect has been to Asheville and made plans for the improvement of the postoffice building under an appropriation of $50,000 for the purpose.

—President Harvie Jordan, of the Southern Cotton Asociation will deliver an address in Raleigh October 19th, instead of the 17th, as he had to change his date.

—In Raleigh on Friday morning Earl Cutts, 12 years old son of C. F. Cutts, got his foot ground off by a Seaboard Air Line freight train which he attempted to board while it was in motion.

—The Charlotte Pipe and Foundry Company is to enlarge its plant. This company is one of the most prosperous in Charlotte nad employs the most skilled laborers. The plant will make both soil and water pipe when the change is made.

—Washington Dispatch, October 12: George W. Vanderbilt and wife, who have recently leased an apartment at Stoneleigh Court, in this city for the coming winter, left to-night for Biltmore. They will remain there five or six weeks, returning in time for the social season.

—Newbern special, Oct. 12: Two Mormon elders are doing 'missionary work" in town. This "faith" seems to be making great inroads among the people of eastern North Carolina. The elders travel afoot in one and twos and there is scarcely a county in this section in which they cannot be found.

Greensboro special, Oct. 12: At a meeting of the board of aldermen this afternoon the Sunday closing ordinance and the construction placed upon it by Mayor Murphy were considered. It was decided to allow restaurants to remain open Sunday, but to allow the ruling requiring soda fountains to be closed during all of the day, and cigars during a part of the day Sunday to stand.

—Raleigh Special, October 12: Secretary Thomas B. Parker of the State Cotton Growers' Asociation, came down from Dilisboro to-day and says ice and heavy frosts made themselves felt there. Speaking about cotton and injury by frost he said the latter would reduce the top crop, as it is called, all the way to the Gulf. He added that there was really no top crop in North Carolina this season and that the growth was about ended before the frost came anyway.

—The annual meting of the State Literary and Historical Association, usually held in Raleigh during the State Fair, will not be held this week, but at some time later in the year. At that time a special effort will be made to induce the legislature to build a fireproof library and historical room and at the meeting it is proposed to give this movement a start. Charles B. Aycock is president and he will deliver an address. The Patterson cup for this year will be awarded.

—Wilson Special, October 12: Last night about 10 o'clock at Lamm's store, near Wilson, Stephen Barnes cut the throat of John Flowers, a well-to-do farmer, inflicting injuries which will in all probability prove fatal. Flowers, with his wife and children, stopped at Lamm's store on their way home. Barnes was there and the two quarreled over a chimney Barnes had built for Flowers. Barnes cut Fowers several times, until Mrs. Flowers pulled him off. Barnes was arrested and is in jail here. Flowers is expected to die.

—Statesville special, Oct. 12: The work of installing machinery in the factory of the Slaine Glass Co. has been completed and the factory set in operation. Only about ten men are here as yet to work in the factory and, not having much raw material on hand, the factory is not in full operation. The company will get the glass in its crude state principally from Pittsburg, Pa., and points abroad. A shipment of imported glass from Germany is on the way now and is expected to arrive soon. The factory will bevel, polish and silver mirrors, etc., and expects to turn out good work. There are several Statesville business men who have stock in the concern, but the factory will be managed by Mr. Slaine, of Pittsburg, who was the promoter of the concern.

—Spencer special, Oct. 12: A head-on collision betwen two freight trains occurred on the main line of the Southern Railway eight miles north of Spencer at four o'clock this morning. Engineer Glenn was at the throttle of the southbound train and H. W. Holt on the northbound freight and both trains were making a moderate rate of speed when each engineer saw the headlight of the other's locomotive. Both men did all that was possible to avert a collision but the crash came before the trains could be stopped, Engineer Holt jumped out of his cab window in order to save himself and in the fall struck on his head, sustaining serious injuries about the back of the neck besides other bruises. The cause of the collision is aid to have been a misunderstanding of orders given to the engineer of the southbound train by which both trains were let into one block.

—Danville, Va., dispatch, Oct. 12: G. A. Miller, proprietor of the Virginia & North Carolina Liquor Company, doing business here, has received ten letters from High Point, N. C., a dry town to which he ships a large quantity of booze. Each letter is typewritten and read as follows: "Dear Sir: On last Sunday one of our policemen was shot here by a drunken man as a result of whiskey purchased from Mr. Miller, of Danville, Va. Most of our cases of drunks have been the result of whiskey purchased from the same man. As one of a band of ten women, we serve this on you as a notice that this must be stopped at once or we will meet the trains and destroy every package of whiskey that comes here." The signature to each is. "One of the Ten Women Whiskey Destroyers." Mr. Miller believes that all of the letters were written by some crank and will pay no attention to them. If any of his whiskey is destroyed he will sue the railroad or express company, he says.

—Newbern Special, October 12: In Superior Court to-day the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff in the case of Stevens vs. the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company. Damages were awarded in the sum of $200. The suit was brought by C. L. Stevens, editor of the Journal, for the violation of an expressed contract August 18, 1905. The plaintiff was in Norfolk. Being desirous of reaching Newbern at the earliest possible moment, he enquired particularly if he could make connection at Goldsboro. The agent assured him that he could. There had been a wreck at Bruce's creek bridge in which several negroes were killed. The wreck was on the main track and the Coast Line company had engaged the track of the Seaboard Air Line to Suffolk. Officials of the road were on the train and interviewed the injured victims, delaying the train and incommoding pasengers to the extent of causing them to lose connection and obliging them to remain at places of transfer at a sacrifice to business obligations. The case had many new features in it and much interest was taken by lawyers and citizens.

ROCK CLIFF LITHIA SPRINGS WATER.

READ WHAT ONE OF THE MOST NOTED CITIZENS OF SOUTH CAROLINA HAS TO SAY OF THE F AMOUS ROCK CLIFF SPRINGS WATER.

Spartanburg, S. C., July 24.

To Rock Cliff Lithia Springs Co.:

Gentlemen:—This will certify that I was severely afflicted with a serious case of erysipelas, that confined me to my bed for about six months or more, with daily attendance of my physician, and which eventually settled in my left leg and became so severe that a consultation of three physicians was held and the decision reached that the lower part of my leg would have to be amputated to prevent the disease extending to the upper part of my leg and body. I declined the operation and was advised to try Rock Cliff Lithia Springs Water. I engaged board near the spring and was advised to bathe my leg in the water, at the same time drinking freely.

This application soon soothed the pain, and for the first time in months previous I slept for about two hours. After a week's treatment, without any medicine or physician's help, I walked to the spring on crutches. I continued the treatment daily, and within two weeks was able to walk to the spring without crutches and in four weeks was able to walk home, a distance of 1½ miles, and resume my official business.

I was permanently cured by the use of the water, and take great pleasure in giving you this testimonial to the efficiency of the Rock Cliff Springs Water in the treatment of erysipelas.

ROMANTIC DRAMA OFFERING.

There is a great treat in store for lovers of the romantic drama when "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" is seen at the Academy next Saturday at matinee and night. Miss Laura Burt and Mr. Henry Stanford are being starred in the production and as the winsome, wilful, headstrong, yet with all fascinating heroine, Miss Burt, has added another triumph to her career.

Set in the delightful atmosphere of the days of "Good Queen Bess," with historic Haddon Hall as a background, the play is a clean, wholesome love story, enlivened by several strong dramatic situations. It is a dramatization, and a wonderfully good one, too, by Paul Kester, of Charles Major's romantic novel, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall." Unlike so many of the "book plays" nowadays, this one adheres very closely to the original story.

Only one new character has been introduced into the piece, that of the dwarf jester, Perkin, a devoted slave of dainty Dorothy. The scenes are laid in Derbyshire, Eng., during the reign of Elizabeth, and the plot hinges on the bitter feud between the Earl of Rutland and Sir George Vernon. Seats go on sale Friday morning.

George Ade's "The County Chairman" will be presented at the Academy a week from to-morrow, Oct. 22nd. It is described as a comedy that "fairly scintillates humor." While there is plenty of side splitting merriment, a strong dramatic plot forms the basis of the story. Jim Hackler, the county chairman, by a master stroke carries the convention and puts in nomination for State's attorney, his young law partner, Tillford Wheeler. The rival candidate is Judge Rigby, the typical miserly lawyer of the country town. Hackler and Rigby are sworn enemies of many years standing and the complication is further complexed because young Wheeler is in love with the daughter of Rigby. As the day of the election draws near Hackler "gum-shoes" it from Antioch where the scene of the play is laid, and goes to a neighboring town where he secures evidence that Rigby has defrauded an orphan girl of her inheritance. The story of the guilt is sufficient to effectually damn Rigby's chance of election. As Hackler is about to send the story of the judge's theft to the press, the judge's wife, Hackler's former fiancee, appears and in a finely acted scene, Hackler with characteristic generosity tears up the evidence for the sake of his old time love for Mrs. Rigby.

This is in main the story. Supplementing it are a score or more of those inimitable characters that George Ade draws so well. The native humor of the shiftless darkey, Sassafras, the town ne'er do well, is as refreshing as any creation on the latter day stage. Sassafras is never malicious and while he leads not exactly an exemplary life, his every movement is the signal for laughter. His expedience of naming his baby for whatever candidate happens to give him the most money is ludicrous. The flirtatious milliner who has "met so many traveling gentlemen," the store box orator who engages in wild flights of rhetoric concerning the impending ruin of the country and is so busy talking about it that he can't split wood for his over-worked wife, the editor of the country paper, the "wise" man of the village who remembers events that happened before he was born, the lovable Lucy and a host of others led by the big rugged Jim Hackler, form a complement of stage characters as entertaining as any on the contemporary stage.

A LIFE'S TROUBLES

Story of Crowded Street Car and Collision With Bread Wagon—What It Meant to Both Men In Charge.

A crowded street car the other day crashed into a bakery wagon. The driver of the wagon insisted that the accident was unnecessary, that the motorman deliberately ran him down. The motorman might have as vehemently protested that the driver was exasperatingly slow in getting out of the way. That is what the crowd—to a man indignant at the motorman saw—. But there was a whole lot that the crowd didn't see.

The motorman was human. In spite of his stolid attitude at the controller, he was made of flesh and blood, same as his passengers, and, like them, he had nerves. For six hours he had, through crowded streets, been picking a way for his car laden down with the weight of anxious, hurrying, jostling humanity, of which each individual had a different aim, different purpose—and a different question. He had for a dozen times barely escaped running into teams; an automobile had just missed running into him. Once his heart had almost stopped beating as an urchin dodged in front of the car and apparently went under the wheels. The motorman's face stiffened white as he waited to hear a death shriek from under him, and a yell of horror and wrath from the crowd. But neither came, the youngster had escaped—and disappeared. It was then that a woman "kicked" because she had been carried two blocks beyond her destination. Half a block farther on a live wire across the track held his car for fifteen minutes. Ten minutes later a fuse blew out. And through it all he had to "make time." Tie-ups were good excuses, to be sure, but every move that he made, he knew full well, was being noted at headquarters. And on his observance of regulations, his judgment, and his self-control hung the bread and butter of little ones at home.

It was a few minutes after the fuse blew out that he encountered the bakery wagon.

Like the motorman, the driver of the wagon was a man, and, like all men, made up of flesh and blood and nerves. He had had his troubles that morning as well as the motorman, and he had been working a good many more hours. His temper— or the state of his nerves—had not been improved in the least by a report that had been sent to the manager of the corporation for which he worked that he had the day before been uncivil to a customer. But in his heart of hearts he did not care, for he knew at that very moment his fate was being considered by the manager. If he was "fired," the consequences caused him to gulp down something that came into his throat. There were others who would suffer with him. A wagon loaded with lumber delayed him for five minutes—like the motorman, he had to "make time." And then the car came along and found his rear wheels squarely across the track. The motorman rang his bell impatiently. The imperative note in it brought all the driver's resentment to the surface. "I'll just make him wait a minute," he decided, and slowed up his team. His eyes met those of the motorman, already behind running schedule, and flashed the message of his decision. The motorman saw and understood. The driver's rebellion against the inevitable brought out in a flash the rebellion in the breast of the motorman. The next instant the car crashed into the bakery wagon.

Now it was very wrong for the motorman to lose his temper, for the running down of a wagon was only an incident to that most deplorable event. By his act, the motorman endangered the life and limb of the passengers entrusted to his care, to say nothing of the damage he might do to the wagon and his car. Men who lose their temper are not safe men on the car's front end. But I, who happened to be a chance observer of it all, found myself in the crowd that gathered, a minority of the one sympathizing with the motorman. As for the driver, everybody sympathized with him, including myself.

As has been said, the sympathy of the crowd was with the driver, principally because the motorman represented a corporation that was plainly out in the open. A dozen cards were handed the driver that he might call their owners as witnesses, if necessary. Denunciation of the motorman and the motorman's company was hard and bitter. The motorman, recovered from his flash of rebellion, stood pale-faced and patient, enduring it all, heavy-hearted and regretful, but saying not a word.

It was easy to see what would happen to the motorman. Behind him was his superintendent, charged with the employment of safe and reliable men, and held accountable for their work. Many such accidents meant a new superintendent, for behind the superintendent was a manager charged with the choice of a superintnedent who could pick men safe and reliable. And behind the manager was that indefinite, soulless thing, the corporation, that held the manager accountable for reliable service and good dividends. Oh, it was easy to see what would happen to the motorman!

And the same was true of the driver. On top of his reported discourtesy to a customer, the smashed wagon—although the railroad company might be made to pay for it—would cast the deciding weight against him, and convince the manager that another driver was desirable. For the manager was held accountable for the men whom he had employed, and the president was held accountable by his corporation, soulless and indefinite, which acted like a machine.

And when we think of it, practically all of us in the modern industrial world, be we magnate responsible to his stockholders, or motorman responsible to his superintendent, are up against pretty much the same game. Being in the game, the wise man plays it as he finds it, however it might tax his self-control. He knew that a moment's impotent rebellion, without in the least accomplishing reform, may bring a world of misery upon himself and those whom he holds dear. The exasperating course of the driver gave him no real satisfaction, it accomplished no reform; the motorman could gain nothing by running down the wagon. But each yielded to an impulse which, when nerves are taxed to the breaking point, comes upon us all.

The other fellow's troubles need not be made our troubles, but to avoid unnecessarily adding to our own load, it is just as well to remember that his troubles are as burdensome as our own.—Franklin Hichborn in Charlotte Observer.

CORPORATE GRAFT NOT RECEIVED

Republican Party Once Depended on Corruption Fund and Corporation Contributions — Hughes Now Spurns Money from Corporations.

(Baltimore Sun.)

The announcement made by Chairman Woodruff, of the New York Republican State Committee for the management of the coming campaign, to the effect that no subscriptions will be accepted from corporations, but only from patriotic residents of the State, marks a new departure in political virtue. In view of the popular agitation that followed the disclosures as to the contributions in former campaigns—these disclosures being elicited by Mr. Hughes, head of the Republican State ticket, during his cross-examination of insurance officials—such an announcement was to be expected. Being nominated as the foe of corporate graft, Mr. Hughes was bound to take an exceptional position with regard to the source of his campaign funds. It may be hoped that the Republican candidate for Governor of New York will accordingly keep a close scrutiny upon the members of his campaign committee and jog their memory from time to time, lest the wily corporations get in their contributions after all, in the shape of individual contributions. There is nothing to prevent individual directors, in their capacity as simple citizens, giving as much in the aggregate as their coreprations gave formerly through an official. Much depends, therefore, upon the stern severity of Chairman Woodruff in the execution of his announced virtuous resolve. Even if his resolution is not carried out fully in practice, its announcement, it must be confessed, is an act of homage to right principles and marks the advance of the public conscience to a point where open and brazen graft is not tolerated. Cynical disregard of decency in party finance is felt, it seems, to be no longer admissible. This shows progress, even though it be regarded by practical politicians as mere "pandering to the better element." After contributions from corporations seeking "influence" are stopped, it will be easier to take the next step of cutting off contributions from individuals who make them with a view of acquiring 'pull." The expectation of our confiding forefathers was that every citizen would vote under the restraint of a high sense of duty, reflecting that the destiny of the republic which he loved would depend upon his right action. Voting for special, or selfish business objects was hardly considered possible, in view of the vast interests involved and in view of the certainty that a wrong decision at the polls would tell disastrously upon the future of the voter and the future of his posterity to the remotest generations. If Chairman Woodruff's reform brings New York voters back to this high ideal, his plan will deserve imitation in all the States.

On his way home he stopped at the schoolhouse and with the aid of a lighted match found the Sevizac and put it in his pocket. Five minutes later he was looking through the exercises in his own room. "Songez-y serieuse ment," Celestine had said to him, and there it was, set forth in the book with its equivalent in English, and with various marks to give the reader an idea of the pronunciation. Then he called to mind some of the other French phrases that Celestine had used. "Il ne tient qu'a vous de reussir," she had told him, and that too was among the exercises, duly translated. "N'avez vous point ete la?" "Je n'y pense plus," and a dozen other commonplace sentences that she had used he found ready translated in the book.

"I wonder that did not occur to me before," he said to himself as he rolled into his hammock. "Of course the girl knows no more about French than one of my little pupils. She has learned a few phrases from the grammar and works them in wherever they will fit."

The sun was stealing down through the palms next morning when the schoolmaster was awakened by George's voice.

"Maws boss! Maws boss!" he called through the half open door. "Dere's a steamer at anchor off de landin', sah!"

Chat was up and dressing in a moment. There were voices in the air, for all the people were hurrying down to the beach to see the unusual sight. He threw open the shutter and looked out, and there she lay, about half a mile from the shore, not very large, but trim and shining bravely in the morning sun. As he looked his eyes opened wider and wider. He rubbed the sleep out of them and looked again, then closed the shutter and hastily made a new toilet, putting on garments that Palmier had not seen before, for the vessel lying at anchor was the steam yacht Rambler, General Fabian, owner.

That meant that "she" had arrived, she being General Fabian's daughter, Miss Brita Fabian, between whom and Chat, as you may have surmised, there existed something more than an understanding. The Fabians spend every winter in Nassau, always taking their yacht along. In a few minutes Chat was at the landing among the negroes, and Celestine was there, and a launch was coming ashore from the yacht.

When General Fabian and his daughter landed, Chat was prepared to give a warm welcome to Miss Brita, but she had hardly shaken his hand before she turned aside, exclaiming:

"Why, there is"— She had caught sight of a familiar face among the crowd of blacks, but as she spoke the face was turned away and its owner tried to escape.

"Nelly! Nelly Stubbs! Don't you remember me? Come here and speak to me."

To Chat's surprise the person who answered to this summons was Mam'selle Celestine. She advanced unwillingly and took the hand Miss Fabian offered, but her commanding air was gone, her eyes were cast down, her face was pale and she looked anything but the queen she had proposed a few hours before to make herself.

"I have met an old acquaintance," Miss Fabian said to Chat when they were alone. "This is the last place in the world that I should have expected to meet Nelly Stubbs."

"Nelly Stubbs!" Chat repeated. "We know her here by the name of Mam'selle Celestine."

"Mam'selle Celestine!" Miss Fabian laughed. "Mam'selle Humbug. That is just like the girl, but her name is Nelly Stubbs. She was my maid for three winters in Nassau and did very well, though her head was always full of romantic notions. She had never been away from Nassau. Her mother was very light colored, almost white, and after being a widow for many years she married a man from some of these islands. After the mother's death the man took Nelly away somewhere, and I had no thought of meeting her here."

Chat returned to Nassau in the yacht, and everybody has read of the wedding that soon followed. Rumor had it that Miss Fabian made remarks when Chat told her of his experience with Nelly Stubbs, but Chat remained platonically loyal to Mam'selle Celestine; said he had allowed her to propose to him, and he would not upset her plans by exposing them. He is a thoroughly good fellow, as I said before, and the mam'selle is no doubt catching the shadow of a new schoolmaster by this time.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, October 13.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 6 to 19 points on covering and bull support. This was better than due on the cables and local bears sold the market 6 to 7 points off after the call. Shorts were rendered timid, however, by the reports of a steady spot situation and rumors of rain storms in the southwest, and the market during the middle of the morning was active and quite firm at a net advance of 17 to 20 points.

Receipts at the ports to-day 50,693 bales, against 46,218 last week and 49,186 last year. For the week 375,000 bales against 346,051 last week and 319,834 last year. To-day's receipts at New Orleans 5,233 bales against 6,952 last year and at Houston 22,963 against 16,760 last year.

With the exception of a few large estates, probably no private grounds in North Carolina are so rich in natural beauties as those of "Blandwood" at Greensboro, a partial view of which is shown in the above illustration. This historic old place, covering an entire city block, was purchased by the Greensboro Keeley Institute; the old Morehead mansion completely overhauled, steam heat,, electric lights, water, sewerage and telephones installed: and recently a large and handsome annex was built, containing apartments en suite, with private baths, spacious halls and porches, sumptuous dining hall, improved kitchen and modern accessories generally. The place has been brought up to date throughout. No detail for the patient's comfort has been overlooked. To-day it offers accommodations unexcelled by any sanitarium in the South and by few in the United States. Here the patient has the rare combination of city and country life, being within five minutes walk of the city's highway, and yet the place is so extensive that all the privacy and seclusion desired is present. The grounds themselves make the place an attractive one. The oak groves, well kept lawns, with beautiful flowers and evergreens give the patient that feeling of rest and comfort which nature only can supply. A more delightful place could hardly be found for those suffering with diseased nerves resulting from overwork or mental depression. The fierce competition of the strenuous life, the demands made upon vitality and reserve force by the complex and exhausting conditions of business and professional occupations are constantly reaping their victims and causing warnings from physicians in the shape of demands for relaxation. The Greensboro Keeley Institute makes a specialty of treating neurasthenia or nerve exhaustion, and at this sanitarium science and nature combine to produce the best results. With the outdoor and indoor recreation and amusements to be had here, books, music, games and the excellent cuisine provided, many an overworked business or professional man could profitably spend a few weeks at the Greensboro Keeley Institute.

AMERICANS WIN ANOTHER GAME

ationals Beaten by Score of 8 to 6 in Fifth Game of Series.

25,000 FRENZIED FANS SAW IT

Wear and Tear of Previous Four Games on Players Told on Both Teams—Sunday Game Will Be Played.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Chicago, October 13.—Out of a bedlam of errors, long hits, vanquished pitchers and the vociferations of half frenzied spectators, the American league team merged victorious over the Nationals to-day, 8 to 6.

The Americans won in spite of five errors which were accountable for nearly all the runs made by the Nationals. The Nationals lost because they could not hit Walsh's "spit ball" delivery. The Americans fielded like amateurs and the Nationals, fielding perfectly, batted very much in the negative. Time after time when a hit meant runs the batters with the impressive averages failed to live up to their reputations.

The day was warm—the first real baseball weather of the series. Twenty-five thousand people wormed their way into the National grounds and at 1:40 o'clock, fifty minutes before the time set for play to begin, the selling of tickets ceased. The noise-makers were out in full force and the sky was full of kites as usual recommending that votes be cast in various directions at the coming election.

With all these regulations baseball conditions existing, the Americans began business with a vigor. Hahn the first man up, touched Reulbach's delivery for a single over second; Jones sacrificed and Hahn scored on Isbell's double to right. Davis hit weakly but was safe while Isbell was tagged out between second and third. Reulbach was apparently nervous and allowed Donohue to walk, filling the bases. Dougherty, however, went out by the narrowest possible margin and two runs were kept from counting. Thus two doubles and a single and a bag on balls counted for but one run.

The Nationals in their half piled up three runs, without much credit to themselves, however. Hofman singled and went to second on Sheckard's sacrifice. Schulte hit safely but Hofman was held at second. Chance was hit by the ball and the bases thus were filled. Steinfeldt forced Chance at second and Hofman scored, but Isbell attempting to make a double play, threw the ball into the crowd back of first base and Schulte also scored as Steinfeldt was reaching second. Tinker knocked an easy one to Walsh who threw low to Donohue, and Steinfeldt scored. Tinker went out stealing.

The Americans evened up matters in the third. Isabell again hit for two bases, this time to left field, and Davis followed with another, scoring Isbell. At this point Captain Chance removed Reulbach and substituted Pfeister in the pitcher's box. He began by striking out Rohe, Donohue walked on a dead ball. Dougherty forced Donohue and Davis reached third and scored on a neat double steal.

It was a clever piece of work which the partisans of both teams joined in in cheering. Sullivan ended the trouble by striking out. From the way both sides were playing nobody would venture to predict which side would win.

In the fourth inning the Americans clinched the game with four runs and incideutly sent Pfiester to join Reulbach on the bench. Pfiester allowed Walsh to walk, Hahn forced Walsh at second. Jones hit safely over third. Isbell sent a long double to right center and Hahn scored. Isbell and Jones scored a moment later when Davis hit the ball to left for two bases.

At this point Pfiester went out and Overall took his place. He inaugurated his reign by allowing Rohe to walk, following which Donohue doubled to left and Davis scored. The American league partisans at this stage of the game were fairly wild with delight. The so-called "hitless wonders" had driven two pitchers to the bench and seemed about to treat the third one likewise. The scoring, however, for this inning, was ended for Comiskey's team. Schulte captured Dougherty's fly off his shoe string and caught Rohe at the plate when the latter tried to score. In their half the Nationals tallied one run in the misplays of their opponents. Tinker was safe when Rohe threw into the crowd and reached second on the error. Evers walked and Kling struck out. Tinker stole third and scored on a wild pitch.

In the sixth, Isbell scored on his own half and Rohe's single. In their half the Nationals made two runs.

After Evers and Kling had faded away, Overall and Hofman were passed and when Sheckard reached first on Rohe's fumble the bases were full.

Schulte doubled to left-center and Overall and Hofman scored. Had it not been for the ground rules, Schulte's hit would have been a home run, and the score would have been even. With men on second and third, Chance hit an easy one to Isbell and was out at first. Thereafter neither side was able to score, although the Nationals looked dangerous in the seventh. Steinfeldt doubled to left along the foul line. It was apparent here that Walsh, who had also pitched on Thursday, was weakening, and Captain Jones very promptly took him out. White finished the game in his stead. He held control and the inning ending with Steinfeldt still on third base.

The Americans have now three out of five games. Tomorrow's game will be played on the American league grounds and should they win this game they will gain the world's championship banner.

HIGH POINT MANUFACTURERS.

Complaint Against Railroads About Freight Rates on Furniture.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Washington, October 13.—A complaint has been made to the Interstate Commerce Commission by the North Carolina Case Workers' Association, a merchandise association with headquarters at High Point, N. C., whose membership consists of firms located in various cities of North Carolina and Virginia engaged in manufacture and sale of furniture, against the Southern Railway, the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, the Norfolk and Western Railway and many other lines of railroad in the west and northwest because of alleged unjust discriminatory charges made by the railroads for the transportation of furniture, especially from High Point, N. C., and Danville, Va., to Pacific coast terminal points. The complainants declare that the railroads charge them $1.70 per hundred pounds to carry furniture from the North Carolina territory to Pacific coast points and insist upon a minimum carload weight of 20,000 pounds, whereas they claim to be able to put into a car only 12,000 pounds of furniture. They insist, therefore, that the rates are unreasonable and practically ruinous and ask the commission to hear the case and issue an order requiring the railroads to limit 36 feet carloads of furniture to 12,000 pounds and remedy the complaints made by the association.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

Roosevelt Will Open It—May Attend New York Days.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Washington, October 13.—New Yorkers are making an effort to secure President Roosevelt's attendance for two consecutive days at the Jamestown Exposition next year. These are New York Day and Robert Fulton Day. Neither has been definitely fixed, but the Robert Fulton Monument Association is endeavoring to have the dates so adjusted that one will follow the other, thus assuring, they believe, a greater interest in the movement by citizens of the Empire State. It is understood that President Roosevelt will attend the opening of the exposition but those interested in New York's share in the affair are anxious that he also be present on the two distinctively New York days Hugh Gordon Miller, one of New York's commissioners to the exposition and vice president of the Robert Fulton Monument Association, talked the matter over with the President to-day. Nothing definite was settled and the question will be again discussed and a definite conclusion reached by the President.

Man Murdered Wife, Four Children and Committed Suicide.

Knoxville, Tenn., October 13.—Chalburn Mantooth, aged 50 years and one of the most prominent farmers of Cocke county, to-day murdered his wife and four children at his home near Newport, Tenn., and fatally injured two other children, braining them all with an axe. He then committed suicide, cutting his throat with a knife. It is believed Mantooth had become suddenly insane.

TAFT AND BACON'S FAREWELL TO CUBA

DEPOSED LEADERS MIFFED

Deggedly Refused to Bid President Roosevelt's Peace Commissioners Farewell—Government Turned Over to Magoon.

(By Cable to The Morning Star.)

Havana, October 13.—Secretary of War Taft and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon, President Roosevelt's peace commissioners, completed their labors here to-day and both departed for the United States on board the battleship Louisiana. They were followed to the beat by the revolutionary leaders but the government officials showed no disposition to join in the farewell, either collectively or individually, and no priminent Moderates appeared at the palace or the wharf to participate in the leav taking. Two leading Liberal Nationalists, Governor Nunez and Congressman Govin, were the only highly prominent members of the government group who saw the party off.

The principal event of the day preceding the departure of Messrs. Taft and Bacon was the taking over of the government by Charles E. Magoon which was done by the issuance of a proclamation declaring that he had entered upon and would discharge the functions of government as directed by President Roosevelt by virtue of the authority of the Platt amendment. This was precisely in line with President Roosevelt's appointment of Mr. Magoon, which states that it was made "by virtue of the authority conferred upon me by the appendix to the constitution of Cuba and by act of Congress March 2, 1901."

The big crowd asembled at the wharf doffed their hats and the Secretaries responded likewise but there was no cheering or other demonstrations. Brigadier General Funston, who had preceded the others, had started for the battleship Virginia in a launch, and a few moments later Mr. Taft handed the ladies into a launch and the party started for the Louisiana, Governor Magoon, Mr. Steinhart, General Bell, Captain of the Port, Captain McCoy and others accompanying them.

The crowd was interested but undemonstrative. Within a few minutes the party had boarded the Louisiana and was received with a Secretary's salute of 17 guns. The Louisiana, the Virginia and the New Jersey were slow in getting straightened out and under way, but when they left their anchorages, where they had been familiar objects for three weeks, the harbor took on a comparatively deserted appearance.

Before leaving Havana, Secretary Taft issued a decree that army supplies and the personal effects of officers and men of the army and navy and marine corps and of civil employes of the provisional government brought to Cuba from the United States should be admitted to the country free of duty.

KILLED WIFE AND HIMSELF.

Horrible Deed as Result of Marital Troubles, in Mississippi.

(By Wire to The Morning Star.)

Tupelo, Miss., October 13.—G. W. Campbell cut the throat of his wife from ear to ear and then killed himself in the same manner in their room at the Johnson Hotel, which Mrs. Campbell conducted. Servants in the house heard a disturbance in the room early to-day and gave the alarm and when those nearest reached the place the bodies of Campbell and his wife were found weltering in their own blood. Indications pointed to a desperate struggle. It is stated that Campbell had threatened frequently to kill his wife and commit suicide, as the result of unhappy marital relations.

SOUTHERN GERMANS TO MEET

Will Gather in Atlanta to Induce German Immigration.

Atlanta, Ga., October 13.—A gathering of German-Americans of the South will be held in Atlanta, Monday, and will be addressed by Dr. Charles Hexamer, of Philadelphia, president of the allied German Societies of America, and other prominent men of German descent. The most practical method of diverting German immigration to the South will be discussed. The matter of spreading correct information regarding the South in the press of Germany and of correcting false reports that have been spread in that country, will also be considered.

President O'Connell, of the International Asociation of Machinists, has summoned the strike committees of the Southern to Washington on Tuesday with the view to bringing them and the Southern officials together. In the meantime no action looking to the return of the men to their positions will be taken.

WILLIAMS AT STATESVILLE.

Says South Never Will Be for Government Ownership.

Charlotte, N. C., October 13.—John Sharp Williams, Congressman from Mississippi and minority leader in the House of Representatives, addressed 2,500 North Carolinians at Statesville, near here, to-day. He devoted much of his time to Government ownership of railroads, declaring the Democracy of the South never had stood for government ownership of railroads and never would.

Mr. Williams was introduced by Editor J. P. Caldwell, of the Charlotte Observer. He was given an ovation such as has rarely been accorded a public speaker in this State. Mr. Williams' visit to this State is primarily in the interest of Mr. R. N. Hackett, Democratic candidate for Congress to succeed Mr. Blackburn in the Eighth District.

THREE KILLED, SIX INJURED.

Terrific Explision of Steamer's Boiler on Ohio River.

Pittsburg, Pa., October 13.—With a deafening report a boiler of the government boat Slackwater exploded late to-day completely wrecking the vessel, killing three men, injuring six others and creating havoc in lock No. 4, on the Ohio river, where the boat was lying when the accident happened. A derrick boat lying alongside the steamer and some construction work being done at the dam were heavily damaged by the explosion. One of the three men killed was Albert Bishop, superintendent of government work at the dam.

Missing: Two unknown negroes, workmen about the boat, who are thought to be lying in the Ohio river dead.

The cause of the explosion is not known and the blame will probably not be fixed until after the coroner's inquest.
